Press Effect Politicians Journalists And The Stories That Shape The Political World:

The Press Effect Kathleen Hall Jamieson, Paul Waldman, 2003 Kathleen Hall Jamieson and Paul Waldman argue in The Press Effect that there is an evident failure of America's press and its citizenry to engage the most important part of our political process in a critical fashion. The authors analyze both press coverage and public opinion using the Annenberg 2000 survey which interviewed more than 100,000 people to examine one of the most interesting periods of modern presidential history from the summer of 2000 through the aftermath of September 11th. How does the press fail us during presidential elections? Jamieson and Waldman show that when political campaigns side step or refuse to engage the facts of the opposing side, the press often fails to step into the void with the information citizens require to make sense of the political give and take. The authors look at the stories through which we understand political events, examining a number of fabrications that have deceived the public about consequential governmental activities and explore the ways in which political leaders and reporters select the language we use to talk and think about politics and the relationship between the rhetoric of campaigns and the reality of governance. The Press Effect is ultimately a wide ranging critique of the press's role in mediating between politicians and the citizens they are supposed to serve. Political Campaigns and Political Advertising Frank W. Baker, 2009-06-04 Examining political campaigns and political advertising through the analytical lens of media literacy, this well illustrated and timely handbook guides readers through the maze of blandishments and spin that is the hallmark of the modern political campaign. It dissects the persuasive strategies embedded in the political messages we encounter every day in the media and demonstrates the importance of critical thinking in evaluating media stories. Key concepts of media literacy are applied to political advertising in traditional media: newspapers, television, radio, and on the Internet, the new frontier of the political advertising wars. Dealing with blogs, social networking, user generated Web sites, and other electronic formats familiar to young voters, this lively introduction to the new world of political messaging appeals to readers' affinity for visual learning as well as their ability to discern messages in text. Unique in applying media literacy concepts to the political context while directly addressing students and general readers, this book not only explains but graphically demonstrates both established techniques of political framing and the new avenues of persuasion being pioneered in digital media. It will also interest viewers who like their political news in traditional media but unconventional formats.

Authenticity in Presidential Campaigns, 1976-2008 Erica J. Seifert, 2014-01-10 Authenticity the dominant cultural value of the baby boom generation became central to presidential campaigns in the late 20th century Beginning in 1976 Americans elected six presidents whose campaigns represented evolving standards of authenticity Interacting with the media and their publics these successful presidential candidates structured their campaigns around projecting authentic images and connecting with voters as one of us In the process they rewrote the political playbook redefined presidentiality and changed the terms of the national political discourse This book is predicated on the assumption that it is worth knowing why Community Newspapers and the Japanese-American Incarceration Camps Ronald Bishop, 2015-06-03 Though much has been said about Japanese American incarceration camps little attention is paid to the community newspapers closest to the camps and how they constructed the identities and lives of the occupants inside Dependent on government and military officials for information these journalists rarely wrote about the violation of the evacuees civil rights Instead they concentrated on the economic impact the camps and the evacuees who would replace workers off to enlist in the military and work for defense contractors would have on the areas they covered Newspapers like the Cody Enterprise and Powell Tribune in Wyoming the Lamar Daily News and the Casa Grande Dispatch regularly published overly optimistic updates on the progress of construction the size of the contractor payrolls and the amount of materials used to build the camps Ronald Bishop and his coauthors reveal how journalists positioned the incarceration camps as a potential economic boon and how evacuees were framed as another community group there to contribute to the region s economic well being Community Newspapers and the Japanese American Incarceration Camps examines the rhetoric and journalistic approach of the local papers and how they informed the communities just outside their walls This book will appeal to scholars of history and journalism     Gender and Political Communication in America Janis L. Edwards, 2009-01-01 At a time when presidential campaigns are shaped to appeal to women voters when masculinity constructs impinge on wartime leaders and when the United States appears to move towards the possibility of a woman president it is vital that communication scholarship addresses the issue of gender and politics in a comprehensive manner Gender and Political Communication in America Rhetoric Representation and Display takes on this challenge as it investigates from a rhetorical and critical standpoint the intersection and mutual influences of gender and political communication as they are realized in the nation's political discourse. Representing some of the leading investigators on gender and political communication as well as emerging scholars, the volume's contributors update and interrogate contemporary issues of gendered politics applicable to the 21st century, including the historic 2008 election. Through their original research, the contributors offer critical examinations of the impact of salient theories and models of gender studies as they relate to historical and contemporary roles and practices in the political sphere. Gender and Political Communication in America's broad and diverse engagement with the subject matter makes it a must read for those interested in women's studies and political communication.

The SAGE Handbook of Rhetorical Studies Andrea A. Lunsford, Kirt H. Wilson, Rosa A. Eberly, 2008-10-29 The SAGE Handbook of Rhetorical Studies surveys the latest advances in rhetorical scholarship, synthesizing theories and practices across major areas of study in the field and pointing the way for future studies. Edited by Andrea A. Lunsford and Associate Editors Kirt H. Wilson and Rosa A. Eberly, the Handbook aims to introduce a new generation of students to rhetorical study and provide a deeply informed and ready resource for scholars currently working in the field.

Key Features Brings together scholars from across the disciplines of Speech Communication, English, and Writing Studies. While rhetoric is by definition interdisciplinary, self-identified scholars in the field are most often institutionally separated from one another. This Handbook bridges this divide by providing a refreshing range of transdisciplinary views on the nature, status, definition, and scope of rhetoric today. Offers a thoroughgoing overview of rhetorical studies today. Organized in four sections: Historical Studies in Rhetoric; Rhetoric Across the Disciplines; Rhetoric and Pedagogy; and Rhetoric and Public Discourse. The volume provides a single resource for engaging rhetorical studies. Underscores the importance of rhetoric to education across a wide range of disciplines as well as to effective participation in public arenas. Thus, the volume connects rhetoric's long teaching tradition to an activist agenda for informed civic engagement. Addresses methodological and theoretical difficulties and offers means of negotiating them. Provides one of the first introductions to rhetorical studies across cultures and to the related debates concerning comparative and contrastive rhetorics.

Taking Journalism Seriously Barbie Zelizer, 2004-04-29 Taking Journalism Seriously News and the Academy argues that scholars have remained too entrenched within their own disciplinary areas, resulting in isolated bodies of scholarship. This is the first book to critically survey journalism scholarship in one volume and organize it by disparate fields. The book reviews existing journalism research in such diverse fields as sociology, history, language studies, political science, and cultural analysis and dissects the most prevalent and understated research in each discipline.

Talk Show Campaigns Michael Parkin, 2014-02-05 Over the past twenty years, presidential candidates have developed an entertainment talk show strategy in which they routinely chat with the likes of Oprah Winfrey, David Letterman, and Jon Stewart. In fact, between 1992 and 2012, there have been more than 200 candidate interviews on daytime and late night talk shows with nearly every presidential candidate from long shot primary contender to major party nominee hitting the talk show circuit at some point during the campaign This book explores the development of the entertainment talk show strategy and assesses its impact on presidential campaigns The chapters mix detailed narrative with extensive empirical data on audiences content viewer reaction and press coverage to explain why candidates have embraced this strategy and the conditions under which these interviews are most likely to meet their expectations The book also explores how these interviews can enhance campaigns by connecting a critical segment of the voting population with candidates who provide useful political information in a casual setting Talk Show Campaigns shows that this is more than a gimmick it s a key part of how candidates communicate with voters which reveals a lot about how campaigns have changed over the past two decades

The Audience Decides Patrick A. Stewart,2023-06-07 The Audience Decides argues that the political parties aided and abetted by mass media have abdicated one of their most important responsibilities that of providing and vetting the best leadership options available The search for followers ratings and attention has led to the structure of presidential debates especially during the primary season being driven by goals of entertaining the public at the expense of enlightening the citizenry To understand the role of the audience as active participant in political debates and how their function has been subverted this book focuses on behavior by the candidates and in person audiences during the 2016 and 2020 general election debates It does so by using observational methods to consider nonverbal behaviors by candidates to establish on stage dominance and the observable audience reactions by the in person audience and their effect on those following the debates It is anticipated that The Audience Decides will allow for evaluation and reconsideration of how debates or whatever replaces them might not only entertain but also enlighten the most important part of representative democracy the voting public Ultimately it is hoped that debates will help the audience decide who their leader will be based upon substance not style letters written to British Conservative politician Boris Johnson The authors explore discourses of nationalism in the English and Scottish Press and examine struggles over definitions of the public in Australian public service broadcasting and the US Medicare debate Emerging possibilities for mediated citizenship are assessed in three studies of online activism and participation in the US and China The book builds on conventional understandings of citizenship and the public sphere calling attention to the need for understanding affective attachments to politics Finally it demonstrates that we cannot fully understand citizenship without looking at the concrete workings of power in and through mediated discourse
