Prevention Across The Lifespan Healthy People For The Twentyfirst C:

Prevention Across the Life Span Ruth N. Knollmueller,1993 Stochastic Processes on a Lattice and Gibbs Measures

Bernard Prum,Jean Claude Fort,1990-12-31 In many domains one encounters systems of interacting elements elements that interact more forcefully the closer they may be The historical example upon which the theory offered in this book is based is that of magnetization as it is described by the Ising model At the vertices of a regular lattice of sites atoms choose an orientation under the influence of the orientations of the neighboring atoms But other examples are known in physics the theories of gasses fluids In biology cells are increasingly likely to become malignant when their neighboring cells are malignant or in medicine the spread of contagious diseases geogenetics even in the social sciences spread of behavioral traits within a population Beyond the spatial aspect that is related to the idea of neighboring sites the models for all these phenomena exhibit three common features The unavoidable ignorance about the totality of the phenomenon that is being studied and the presence of a great number of often unsuspected factors that are always unquantified lead inevitably to stochastic models The concept of accident is very often inherent to the very nature of the phenomena considered so to justify this procedure one has recourse to the physicist's principle of indeterminacy or for example to the factor of chance in the Mendelian genetics of phenotypes
