Racial And Ethnic Differences In Disease:

Racial and Ethnic Differences in Disease Anthony P. Polednak, 1989 This book presents a comprehensive account of differences in the frequencies of various diseases among a wide range of racial and ethnic groups throughout the world today. It provides epidemiologists, physicians, sociologists, and anthropologists with a methodological framework for understanding the concepts of race and ethnic group, the use of these concepts in epidemiology, and the interpretation of epidemiologic studies of disease. The volume includes information on the physical anthropology of major racial ethnic groups as well as chapters on genetic diseases, infectious and parasitic diseases, cardiovascular diseases, cancers, and many other chronic disorders. Each chapter provides descriptive information on the relative frequencies of diseases and the methods used in studies, as well as a systematic discussion of the interpretation of the racial and ethnic differences described, which may arise from such factors as errors in measurement or socioeconomic differences between groups. Genetic and biological factors are also considered, and many individual studies are summarized and critically appraised. The text is ideal for graduates and undergraduates alike, while the authors' non-technical approach is easily accessible to general readers with an interest in the subject.

Racial and Ethnic Differences in the Health of Older Americans National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Commission on Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, 1997-09-23 Older Americans, even the oldest, can now expect to live years longer than those who reached the same ages even a few decades ago. Although survival has improved for all racial and ethnic groups, strong differences persist both in life expectancy and in the causes of disability and death at older ages. This book examines trends in mortality rates and selected causes of disability, cardiovascular disease, dementia, for older people of different racial and ethnic groups. The determinants of these trends and differences are also investigated, including differences in access to health care and experiences in early life, diet, health behaviors, genetic background, social class, wealth, and income. Groups often neglected in analyses of national data, such as the elderly Hispanic and Asian Americans of different origin and immigrant generations, are compared. The volume provides understanding of research bearing on the health status and survival of the fastest growing segment of the American population.

Understanding Racial and Ethnic Differences in Health in Late Life National Research Council, Division of Behavioral and Social Sciences and Education, Committee on Population, Panel on Race, Ethnicity, and Health in Later Life, 2004-09-08 As the population of older Americans grows, it is becoming more racially and ethnically diverse. Differences in health by racial and ethnic status could be increasingly consequential for health policy and programs. Such differences are not simply a matter of education or ability to pay for health care. For instance, Asian Americans and Hispanics appear to be in better health on a number of indicators than White Americans, despite, on average, lower socioeconomic status. The reasons are complex, including possible roles for such factors as selective migration, risk behaviors, exposure to various stressors, patient attitudes, and geographic variation in health care. This volume, produced by a multidisciplinary panel considers such possible explanations for racial and ethnic health differentials within an integrated framework It provides a concise summary of available research and lays out a research agenda to address the many uncertainties in current knowledge It recommends for instance looking at health differentials across the life course and deciphering the links between factors presumably producing differentials and biopsychosocial mechanisms that lead to impaired health

Cardiovascular Disease in Racial and Ethnic Minorities Keith C. Ferdinand, Annemarie Armani, 2010-07-07 Cardiovascular heart disease mortality in African Americans is the highest of all major racial ethnic subpopulations in the United States Examining race and ethnicity Cardiovascular Disease in Racial and Ethnic Minorities will reveal that there are unacceptable healthcare disparities in risk factor prevalence disease states and cardiovascular outcomes in the United States Written by a team of experts Cardiovascular Disease in Racial and Ethnic Minorities examines to what degree biomedical and scientific literature can clarify the impact of genetic variation versus environment as related to cardiovascular disease Chapters illustrate the magnitude of cardiovascular and metabolic disparities and the effect of environment on diseases

Racial and Ethnic Disparities in Fertility and Assisted Reproduction Fady I. Sharara, David B. Seifer, 2025-08-25 When the first edition of this book was published in 2013 it was still controversial to many on whether or not true racial differences existed in the delivery of fertility care Since then much like the evolution of the acceptance of climate change it is now generally believed that not only are there differences but that there are real racial and ethnic disparities in access and treatment outcomes This second edition of Racial and Ethnic Disparities in Fertility and Assisted Reproduction documents our present understanding of the scope contributing causes and complexity of potential solutions for closing the racial ethnic disparity gap in using our most medically advanced assisted reproductive technologies to bring joy to those who wish to become parents Effort has been directed to developing a better understanding of how and why these disparities occur An expert assembly of key leaders in the field of reproductive medicine imparts insight and clinical experience to identify and analyze the possible causes of racial disparities infertility outcome This book is sure to distinguish itself as the definitive reference on racial and ethnic differences in assisted reproduction

Racial and Ethnic Disparities in Health and Health Care Elene V. Metrosa, 2006 It is generally conceded that there are significant disparities in health and health care based on a person's racial and ethnic background Infant mortality rates for black babies remain nearly two and one half times higher than for whites The life expectancy for black men and women remains at nearly one decade fewer years of life compared with their white counterparts Rates of death attributable to heart disease stroke prostate and breast cancer remain much higher in black populations Diabetes disease rates are more than 30 percent higher among Native Americans and Hispanics than among whites Minorities remain grossly under represented in the health professions workforce relative to their proportions in the population In addition despite a large and growing body of scientific evidence many patients and providers remain unaware that racial and ethnic health care disparities are a problem and perceptions about health care inequalities vary between minorities and whites closing the disparity gap This book presents new research focusing on these disparities

Handbook of Behavioral Medicine Andrew Steptoe, 2010-09-27 Behavioral medicine emerged in the 1970s as the interdisciplinary field concerned with the integration of behavioral psychosocial and biomedical science knowledge relevant to the understanding of health and illness and the application of this knowledge to prevention diagnosis treatment and rehabilitation Recent years have witnessed an enormous diversification of behavioral medicine with new sciences such as genetics life course epidemiology and new technologies such as neuroimaging coming into play This book brings together such new developments by providing an up to date compendium of methods and applications drawn from the broad range of behavioral medicine research and practice The book is divided into 10 sections that address key fields in behavioral medicine Each section begins with one or two methodological or conceptual chapters followed by contributions that address substantive topics within that field Major health problems such as cardiovascular disease cancer HIV AIDs and obesity are explored from multiple perspectives The aim is to present behavioral medicine as an integrative discipline involving diverse methodologies and paradigms that converge on health and well being
