Abstract

This paper sought to develop a literature review-based framework for fitting research projects into philosophies of research. The philosophical underpinning of the study to optimize the financial performance of pension funds through asset allocation and portfolio management decisions was used as a case in point. The paper argues that all knowledge generation processes should be deeply rooted in philosophy if they are to produce reliable solutions to research problems. The study established that the research approaches and the science of doing research need to be informed by the philosophical positions of reality, knowledge, logic and ethical stance of the researcher. It is also noted that the philosophical positions of the researcher should be derived from the objective or subjective nature of the variables in the research problem. In relation to optimizing the financial performance of pension funds, the study concluded that pragmatism is the most appropriate guiding philosophy for determining the ontological, epistemological, axiological and methodological positions of the researcher. It is also concluded that the mixed method research paradigm, implemented through the explanatory sequential design is a better approach to comprehensively understand the subject matter since pension fund financial performance is a function of both subjective and objective factors.

students Computer architecture as it happened in other fields such as electronics evolved from the small to the large that is it left the realm of low level hardware constructs and gained new dimensions as distributed systems became the keyword for system implementation As such the system architect today assembles pieces of hardware that are at least as large as a computer or a network router or a LAN hub and assigns pieces of software that are self contained such as client or server programs Java applets or protocol modules to those hardware components The freedom she he now has is tremendously challenging The problems alas have increased too What was before mastered and tested carefully before a fully fledged mainframe or a closely coupled computer cluster came out on the market is today left to the responsibility of computer engineers and scientists invested in the role of system architects who fulfil this role on behalf of software vendors and integrators add value system developers R D institutes and final users As system complexity size and diversity grow so increases the probability of inconsistency unreliability non responsiveness and insecurity not to mention the management overhead

What System Architects Need to Know The insight such an architect must have includes but goes well beyond the functional properties of distributed systems
