Participatory Development in Appalachia Susan Emley Keefe, 2009

Often thought of as impoverished backward and victimized the people of the southern mountains have long been prime candidates for development projects conceptualized and controlled from outside the region This book breaking with old stereotypes and the strategies they spawned proposes an alternative paradigm for development projects in Appalachian communities one that is far more inclusive and democratic than previous models Emerging from a critical analysis of the modern development process the participatory development approach advocated in this book assumes that local culture has value that local communities have assets and that local people have the capacity to envision and provide leadership for their own social change It thus promotes better decision making in Appalachian communities through public participation and civic engagement Filling a void in current research by detailing useful hands on tools and methods employed in a variety of contexts and settings the book combines relevant case studies of successful participatory projects with practical recommendations from seasoned professionals Editor Susan E Keefe has included the perspectives of anthropologists sociologists and others who have been engaged sometimes for decades in Appalachian communities These contributors offer hopeful new strategies for dealing with Appalachia s most enduring problems strategies that will also aid activists and researchers working in other distressed or underserved communities Susan E Keefe is professor of anthropology at

Appalachian State University She is the editor of Appalachian Mental Health and Appalachian Cultural Competency A Guide for Medical Mental Health and Social Service Professionals

Race, Class, Power, and Organizing in East Baltimore Marisela B. Gomez, 2012-11-15 This book examines the historical and current practices of rebuilding abandoned and disinvested communities in America Using a community in East Baltimore as an example Race Class Power and Organizing in East Baltimore shows how the social structure of race and class segregation of the past contributed in the creation of our present day urban poor and low income communities of color and continue to affect the way we rebuild these communities today Specific to East Baltimore is the presence of a powerful and prestigious medical complex which has directly and indirectly affected the abandonment and rebuilding of East Baltimore While it has grown in power and land over the past 100 years the neighborhoods around it have decreased in size and capital widening the gap between the rich and the poor The author offers a critical analysis of the relationships between powerful private institutions like the Johns Hopkins Medical Institutions and government and their intention in rebuilding urban communities by asking the question How do we determine equity in benefit Focusing on a current rebuilding project using eminent domain to displace historical African American communities and the acquiring of land for private development this book details the role of community organizing in challenging these types of non community participatory rebuilding processes resulting in the gentrification of urban neighborhoods The detailed analysis of the community organizing process when families are displaced offers similarly affected communities a tool box for challenging current developers and government in unfair rebuilding practices The context of these practices highlights the current laws and policies that contribute to continued displacement and disadvantage to poor communities without addressing the rhetoric of the intention of government subsidized private development This book examines the effect of such non participatory and non transparent rebuilding practices on the health of the people and place

Community Engagement in Post-Disaster Recovery Graham Marsh, Iftekhar Ahmed, Martin Mulligan, Jenny Donovan, Steve Barton, 2017-09-11 Community Engagement in Post Disaster Recovery reflects a wide array of practical experiences in working with disaster affected communities internationally It demonstrates that widely held assumptions about the benefits of community consultation and engagement in disaster recovery work need to be examined more critically because poorly conceived and hastily implemented community engagement strategies have sometimes exacerbated divisions within affected communities and or resulted in ineffective use of aid funding It is equally demonstrated that well crafted creative and thoughtful programming is possible The wide collection of case studies of practical experience from around the world is presented to help establish ways of working with communities experiencing great challenges The book offers practical suggestions on how to give more substance to the rhetoric of community consultation and engagement in these areas of work It suggests the need to work with a dynamic understanding of community formation that is particularly relevant when people experience unforeseen challenges and traumatic experiences This title interrogates the concept of community through an extensive review of the literature and explores the ways of working with communities in transition and particularly in their recovery phases through an array of case studies in a range of socioeconomic and political contexts Focused on the concept of community in post disaster recovery solutions an aspect which has received little critical interrogation in the literature this book will be a valuable resource to students and scholars in disaster management as well as humanitarian agencies
