PHILIP P. EVERTS

Institute of International Studies, Leiden University, Netherlands

I. Introduction

Early in 1971 UNESCO asked us to prepare a new International Repertory of Institutions for Peace and Conflict Research, and to undertake an analysis of the data collected for that purpose.¹ In order to carry out a task like this it is necessary to formulate, at least for oneself, as clearly as possible, what is to be understood by this kind of activity, called peace and conflict research.² What then do we understand by peace and conflict research? What are its

1. This article is based on the introduction to the International Repertory of Institutions for Peace and Conflict Research, UNESCO, Paris 1972, and is published here with UNESCO's permission. The author is Director of the Institute for International Studies, University of Leyden and former Editor of the International Peace Research Newsletter. He wants to express his gratitude to all those who assisted through their advice and criticism to improve the quality of this paper and to all the institutions which facilitated his work by promptly supplying the necessary data. Special thanks go to Joris Voorhoeve and Gerard Aupers, who assisted in the collection, coding and processing of the data.

2. Although there are a number of differences between peace research and conflict research, the term "peace research" will be used throughout as identical with "peace and conflict research".

purposes, object and method? It is—in short—a field of applied research into the causes of wars and other large scale conflicts, and the conditions of a more peaceful world.

Despite the fact that the number of people and institutions engaged in this field of enquiry is growing rapidly, and that a number of scientific journals devoted to this subject are now more or less firmly established and peace studies are being introduced in university curricula, the whole "movement" is still very much in its infancy and the concept peace research is the subject of much controversy. A battle is still being waged on two fronts—and there is much division of opinion within the ranks. On the one hand peace research has yet to establish itself firmly and defend its position in a sceptical and often hostile academic environment. As anyone working in this environment knows, university departments behave more often than not like warring tribes, fighting against encroachments on their territory and way of life. Peace research in many countries came into being in opposition against established academic and political interests and is often still viewed with suspicion and disbelief. Is it a scientific discipline in its own right or politics in Social Conflicts And Third Parties Jacob Bercovitch, 2019-07-15 The pressing need to find new ways to settle social disputes and render them less destructive has led to a concern with the role that outsiders or third parties can play in the conflict resolution process. This book contributes to an increased understanding of the nature and activities of third parties in a wide range of conflict situations. Dr. Bercovitch first describes and interprets the major elements of the third party intervention process, then provides an empirical examination of its structure and characteristics in settings as diverse as family struggles, labor management problems, and international disputes. Throughout, he illustrates the dynamics of the process from the vantage point of the third parties themselves. Finally, he points out the conditions most likely to strengthen this type of conflict management and discusses the means for determining the appropriate forms of intervention at different junctures of a dispute.
