Foreign Direct Investment Dale R. Weigel, 1997-01-01 The report reviews lessons from the International Finance Corporation s IFC investment and advisory experience in the developing world which show the interactions between policy frameworks and the volume and structure of foreign direct investments FDI Case studies show how the Corporation promotes successful project structures and regulatory changes as it tries to attain the strongest development impact for investments In developing countries FDI has flowed mainly into manufacturing and processing industries In the past investment attractiveness had been closely linked to possession of natural resources or a large domestic market while production and trade globalization competitiveness as a location for investment and exporting have become the main determinants of attractiveness Sources of FDI in the past came almost exclusively from industrial countries though recently those sources have widened emerging from developing countries in their own right and for their own regions IFC as an international initiative to promote FDI in developing countries is liable to promote bilateral trade agreements bilateral and multilateral financial institutions and investment promotion programs its advisory role may vary from diagnostic studies overiewing constraints to FDI to investment policy studies giving specific solutions on either changes or strategies The study further looks at how policy environment is set and at finding investor opportunities through project financing largely structured as joint ventures The inherent fragile nature of joint ventures restricts foreign ownership thus limiting project structures however careful project design has lead to successful operations by ensuring management and financial arrangements Still to maximize benefits an unfinished agenda of policy reform remains and as more countries open to FDI this integration will lead to an overall increase in FDI flows

Moran, 2006 Is foreign direct investment good for development Moving beyond the findings of his previous book Does Foreign Direct Investment Promote Development CGD and IIE 2005 Theodore H Moran presents surprisingly good and startlingly bad news The good news highlights how foreign direct investment can make a contribution to development significantly more powerful and more varied than conventional measurements indicate The bad news reveals that foreign direct investment can also distort host economies and politics with consequences substantially more adverse than critics and cynics have imagined This book rigorously examines the principal controversies and debates about FDI in manufacturing and assembly extractive industries and infrastructure in light of new evidence and analysis Written in engaging prose it identifies how developed and developing countries multilateral lending agencies and civil society can work in concert to harness foreign direct investment to promote the growth and welfare of developing countries

Measuring Political Risk Charlotte H. Brink, 2004 Offering a fresh transparent approach encompassing new material this invigorating volume measures political risk for instance the risk that foreign investment might face in any country It also demonstrates how progress or regress made in good governance initiatives as conditionalities to aid can be assessed Governments can monitor their own policy environment s and take remedial action if necessary The methodology allows for measurement of previously un quantified soft factors that add to the risks foreign investors might face demonstrating why these factors are of importance to both risk assertive and risk averse investors

Capital and Chaos Benjamin A. T. Attention to FDI from China Theodore H. Moran,Lindsay Oldenski,2013-09-01 Americans have long been ambivalent toward foreign direct investment in the United States Foreign multinational corporations may be a source of capital technology and jobs But what are the implications for US workers firms communities and consumers as the United States remains the most popular destination for foreign multinational investment Theodore H Moran and Lindsay Oldenski find that foreign multinational firms that invest in the United States are alongside US headquartered American multinationals the most productive and highest paying segment of the US economy These firms conduct more research and development provide more value added to US domestic inputs and export more goods and services than other firms in the US economy The superior technology and management techniques they employ spill over horizontally and vertically to improve the performance of local firms and workers As the United States wants not only to expand employment but also create well paying jobs that reverse the falling earnings that many US workers and middle class families have suffered in recent decades it is more important than ever to enhance the United States as a destination for multinational investors The Effect of Treaties on Foreign Direct Investment Karl P Sauvant,Lisa E Sachs,2009-03-27 Over the past twenty years foreign direct investments have spurred widespread liberalization of the foreign direct investment FDI regulatory framework By opening up to foreign investors and encouraging FDI which could result in increased capital and market access many countries have improved the operational conditions for foreign affiliates and strengthened standards of treatment and protection By assuring investors that their investment will be legally protected with closed bilateral investment treaties BITs and double taxation treaties DTTs this in turn creates greater interest in FDI The Effect of Capital Controls on Foreign Direct Investment Decisions Under Country Risk with Intangible Assets Kinga Z. Elo,2007-04 This paper examines how capital controls affect FDI decisions and how the impact of these restrictive measures varies with different levels of country risk We construct a model of firms FDI decisions broadly in Dunning s eclectic theory framework using real options to emphasize economic uncertainty and country risk Numerical results of the model take the form of quality statistics that uncover the underlying dynamics hidden in the aggregate data that is responsible for the low performance of recent empirical studies We find that increasing levels of capital controls reduce the life span of FDI investments at each level of country risk and foreign investors willingness towards risk sharing increases We reveal a significant interaction between capital control and country risk resulting in a nonlinear relationship between these and the volatility and volume statistics We estimate a standard cross sectional model that provides strong support for our theoretical findings Foreign Direct Investment in Australia Isabel Faeth,2010 Submitted in partial fulfilment of the requirements of the degree of Doctor of Philosophy with coursework component December 2005
