Baer, Cheryl Williamson Gray, 1995 Transitional Economies Y. Kalyuzhnova, M. Taylor, 2001-07-19 The integration of the countries of Central

Restructuring Banks and Enterprises Michael S. Borish,Millard Long,Michel Noël,1995

Between State and Market Ira W. Lieberman,Stilpon Nestor,Raj M. Desai,1997-01-01 IFC Discussion Paper No 32 Over the years demand for education at all levels in Kenya has greatly outpaced supply a gap that has been reduced by private schools catering to the needs of a wide range of socioeconomic groups This gap will widen further unless the private sectors role is expanded but private educational institutions face a number of serious constraints primarily stemming from lack of adequate finance and in many cases limited management skills This paper reviews the market and its constraints and focuses on conditions under which private financial institutions and the International Finance Corporation might play a useful role in the sector Annexes include 1996 operating costs of Kenya s academic technical and vocational schools

Privatization and Restructuring in Central and Eastern Europe Gerhard Pohl,1997-01-01 Why do women in most developing countries lag behind men in literacy Why do women get less schooling than men This anthology examines the educational decisions that deprive women of an equal education It assembles the most up to date data organized by region Each paper links the data with other measures of economic and social development This approach helps explain the effects different levels of education have on womens fertility mortality rates life expectancy and income Also described are the effects of women s education on family welfare The authors look at family size and women s labor status and earnings They examine child and maternal health as well as investments in children s education Their investigation demonstrates that women with a better education enjoy greater economic growth and provide a more nurturing family life It suggests that when a country denies women an equal education the nation s welfare suffers Current strategies used to improve schooling for girls and women are examined in detail The authors suggest an ambitious agenda for educating women It seeks to close the gender gap by the next century Published for The World Bank by The Johns Hopkins University Press

assessing the liberalization of a banking sector along various process steps based on financial liberalization and transformation studies This framework along with the indicators for the process and the results of liberalization is applied to the banking sectors in India and China to test for the effects of liberalization on the sector and the macro level The key finding is that while liberalization has improved the sectoral performance it has so far had no effect on the macro level The book features a detailed description of recent reforms in the Indian banking sector a set of indicators for evaluating banking sector reforms and a large number of graphs with key figures for the banking sectors in India and China Economies in Transition Ian Jeffries,2013-05-13 This volume provides an in depth review of major economic developments in those economies which are in some stage of transition following the collapse of communism in the Eastern block The book is divided into four parts theoretical issues in the transition from command to market economies the events in the fifteen independent countries of the former Soviet Union Eastern Europe non European states In all the author chronicles events from 1993 to 1995 in thirty five countries Economic developments are set in their political context and presented chronologically as far as possible A Guide to the Economies in Transition carries on where Ian Jeffries previous book left off The work is entirely new and as such can be seen as a companion to the earlier title These books are becoming known as invaluable guides providing unique levels of reference in work of this type World Development Report 1996 ,1996 Almost one third of the world s population has embarked on a transition from planned to market economies Like economic reforms elsewhere the long term goal of this transition is to build a thriving market economy capable of delivering long term growth in living standards Now in its 19th annual edition the World Development Report 1996 takes an in depth look at these transition countries focusing on the key lessons that have taken place thus far The introduction to the Report poses a number of key questions that are addressed in later chapters including questions relating to initial challenges and how contries have tackled them from very different starting points and political conditions The Report also focuses on the additional challenges these transition countries face with a final chapter that summarizes the main conclusion of the Report creating a text that will no doubt become the definitive source for students stydyng international economics and politics Financial Policies in Socialist Countries in Transition , Recapitalization of Banks in Transition Economies James C. is a complex medium term process that requires significant government intervention and careful management at both the strategic and individual bank levels This paper highlights the range of operational and strategic issues to be addressed and the institutional arrangements needed to foster an effective banking system restructuring and maximize the returns on government investment The approaches to recapitalization have varied with countries choosing different mixes of direct capital injections and asset purchase and rehabilitation The choice of an appropriate mix is critical to minimize the expected present value of government outlays net of recoveries

Banking Reform in Transition Stijn Claessens, 1999 August 1996 The institutional capacity of banks in transition economies improves faster when a new or parallel private banking system is allowed to emerge than it does when the government tries simply to reform existing state owned banks Banking reform should stress decentralized institution building and penalties for weak banks In reforming the financial sector in transition economies one important debate is about whether governments should try to reform existing state owned banks the rehabilitation approach or whether a new private banking system should be allowed to emerge a new entry approach Or should there be a mix of the two approaches in which the activities of state banks are restricted while a parallel private banking system develops Claessens's cross country comparison of banks institutional development in 25 transition economies suggests that progress can be faster under the new entry approach especially relative to initial conditions Progress under the rehabilitation approach appears to be inhibited by poor incentives In most countries even those with a good banking infrastructure and a large segment of good banks a two track process has evolved with large and growing differences between weak and strong banks Whatever the banking reform approach taken weak banks have moved very little beyond central planning Regression estimates suggest that in transition economies three things are associated with slow progress of weak banks overconcentration preferential treatment by governments and limited entry for new banks The direction of causality is often unclear Policies and structural conditions can affect bank quality but whenever a banking system has a certain quality particular policies may also arise or structures exist The role of banks will remain limited in many transition economies because of weak legal infrastructures much uncertainty and inside information and problems associated with highly leveraged financial intermediaries including fraud political interference and implicit guarantees In the short run self finance and intermediation among enterprises and through nonbank financial institutions may prevail This paper a product of the Office of the Senior Vice President Development Economics was written as a background paper for World Development Report 1996 From Plan to Market

Developing Commercial Law in Transition Economies Cheryl Williamson Gray, Kathryn Hendley, 1995
