Multinationals and Economic Growth in East Asia Shujiro Urata, Chia Siow Yue, Fukunari Kimura, 2006-11-22

This is a comprehensive examination of the role of foreign direct investment in East Asia before and after the financial crisis of mid 1997

Affiliates of U.S. and Japanese Multinationals in East Asian Production and Trade Robert E. Lipsey, 1999

Since 1977 and in some cases starting before that most East Asian countries export patterns in manufacturing have been transformed from industry distributions typical of developing countries to distributions more like those of advanced countries. The process of change in most cases started with inward FDI to produce for export in the new industries particularly by U S firms in electronics and computer related machinery. The U S firms were followed in electronics by Japanese multinationals. Over time in most cases the U S owned affiliates turned more to sales in host country markets and their share in host country exports declined although the host countries specializations in the new industries continued. U S and Japanese firms played somewhat different roles. U S firms investments were always distributed more along the lines of U S export comparative advantage far from the previous patterns of the host countries. The industry distribution of Japanese investments initially followed more the lines of the host countries comparative advantage and Japanese affiliates were less export oriented than U S affiliates. However Japanese affiliates have become more like U S affiliates in both export orientation and industry composition. Their early concentration in textiles and apparel faded and they are more heavily concentrated than U S affiliates and more export oriented in both electrical machinery and transport equipment.

Multinational Enterprises in Asian Development Premachandra Athukoralge, 2007-01-01

A remarkable product of analytical formulation, data disaggregation and methodological rigour. Anthony P D Costa Pacific Affairs

Cross border investment is a key driver of the globalisation process and multinational enterprises a key driver of productivity growth. This new book offers a comprehensive and informed evaluation of the role of multinationals in the world's fastest growing region. The book will not only be of interest to researchers and students but also to analysts in the policy making community. David Greenaway University of Nottingham UK

This volume offers a wealth of information and insights into the roles of multinational enterprises in shaping recent economic developments in East and South Asia. These direct investments which are now the dominant source of finance for the developing regions globally are generally welcomed today though this was untrue earlier. However the cases in this volume draw out ways and contexts in which the greatest advantage may be sought from these capital inflows. Robert E B Lucas Boston University

US Foreign direct investment by MNCs once considered the bane of developing countries is today a leading indicator of their relative success. The reality is more complicated however as this fresh assessment of the role of MNCs in Asia explains clearly and persuasively. This study is a major contribution to literature on the role of MNCs in developing countries drawing heavily on the author's own original research on foreign direct investment in several Asian countries What is the role of MNCs in developing countries and how has it changed over the past two decades What are the cost and benefits to host developing countries of MNCs direct investment What measures should developing countries take to attract MNCs This book provides clear and convincing answers to these questions based on the kind of rigorous empirical analysis for which the author is renowned James Riedel The Johns Hopkins University School of Advanced International Studies US This book takes a fresh look at unresolved issues associated with the role of multinational enterprises and foreign direct investment in economic development in light of the experiences of developing countries in Asia Each chapter presents a self contained treatment of a specific theme relating to the developmental implications of MNEs encompassing the current state of the debate and relevant theory and policy implications The key aspects of MNE development interface covered in the book include expansion of manufacturing exports global integration through international fragmentation of production research and development productivity growth susceptibility to and recovery from financial crises macroeconomic adjustment and international competitiveness and economic transition from plan to market Multinational Enterprises in Asian Development will prove a valuable reference tool for academics researchers and students focusing on trade development and international business Professional economists and policy makers wishing to broaden their understanding of the role of MNEs as an integral part of the international development policy will also find much to interest them in this book

Economic Integration in East Asia Masahisa Fujita, Satoru Kumagai, Koji Nishikimi, 2008-01-01 Increasing numbers of free trade and economic partnership agreements have been concluded among many countries in East Asia and economic integration has progressed rapidly on both a de facto and de jure basis However as the authors of this book argue integration may intensify regional inequalities in East Asia and so this process has attracted much attention of late Will it actually succeed in achieving greater economic growth or will it in fact cause growing regional disparity This book presents a clear picture of East Asian integration focusing on various aspects including the structure of intra regional trade industrial location patterns especially of multinational enterprises the formation of industrial agglomeration the development of political and institutional frameworks for integration Economic Integration in East Asia addresses these issues from the perspectives of both spatial and neoclassical economics As the book highlights if the regional disparities continue to grow this may constitute a fatal obstacle to deepening integration and the growth potential of East Asia With its focus firmly on recommendations for the future this book will be of great interest to academics and researchers of development Asian studies and economic geography as well as development specialists in government and international organizations involved in East Asian integration

A World of Regions Peter J. Katzenstein, 2015-11-16 Observing the dramatic shift in world politics since the end of the Cold War Peter J Katzenstein argues that regions have become critical to contemporary world politics This view is in stark contrast to those who focus on the purportedly stubborn persistence of the nation state or the inevitable march of globalization In detailed studies of technology and foreign investment domestic and international security and cultural diplomacy and popular culture Katzenstein examines the changing regional dynamics of Europe and Asia which are linked to the United States through Germany and Japan Regions Katzenstein contends are interacting closely with an American imperium that combines territorial and non territorial powers Katzenstein argues that globalization and internationalization create open or porous regions Regions may provide solutions to the contradictions between states and markets security and insecurity nationalism and cosmopolitanism Embedded in the American imperium regions are now central to world politics
