Reinventing Care David Barton Smith, 2003 TThe recent growth of assisted living facilities and programs has shaken the foundations of the system of long term care for the elderly in the United States Fueled by consumer frustrations with the available options notably nursing homes the assisted living model emerged during the 1990s to promise shelter health care control of one's own life less government involvement and a real home. But how well have the advocates and developers of assisted living delivered on such promises? And what are the model's implications for public policy and the future of caregiving? In Reinventing Care, David Barton Smith offers brilliant insights into those questions by examining the realities of assisted living in New York City. Encompassing the largest most concentrated population of elderly in the United States, New York spends more per person caring for its seniors than any other urban center. Yet while the size of the city's care system boggles the mind, it nevertheless contains the same elements that exist in other metropolitan areas and thus provides valuable lessons for the nation as a whole. Smith's study draws on twenty-five years of research including hundreds of interviews and visits to representative facilities. He provides a succinct overview of how care is presently organized for New York's aging population and traces the history of the system up to the present. Among the key issues he addresses are the role of market forces and government regulation, the impact of class differences on access to quality care, and the ways in which perceptions of community affect the creation and management of assisted living programs. At the heart of the book are ten fascinating case studies, half of them focused on private pay facilities and the other half on public pay institutions. While finding that the actualities of assisted living rarely match the rhetoric of its proponents, Smith sees much to admire in its goals. He suggests tactics and strategies such as promoting family and community-based models of assisted living and adopting a standard of licensure for certain facilities that could point the way to a better future.

Strategy Mix for Nonprofit Organisations Annette E. Zimmer, Christina Stecker, 2013-03-19. In many countries, particularly in continental Europe, societies have been plagued by high unemployment for several decades. Simultaneously, due to recent shifts from industrial to service-oriented, post-industrial societies, labor as a significant culture code is increasingly losing importance. Because of this, the third or voluntary sector as a place of employment and as a service agency to society has become important for Europe, as indicated by the 1997 Communication of the European Commission and various declarations by the European Parliament and the EU's Economic and Social Council. Strategy Mix for Nonprofit Organizations: Vehicles for Social and Labor Market Integration explores the role of the third sector in Europe, where unemployment is high, and in North America, where unemployment is rising, and explores the gaps that the third sector is fulfilling, both as a social service and as an employer. The volume is organized into two distinctive parts. Part 1, The Nonprofit Sector and Social Integration, highlights the embeddedness of the sector in selected countries; it discusses how the sector is currently affected by changes of public policy, particularly in the traditional social democratic welfare state regimes, and it draws our attention to the sector's potentials to provide avenues for social integration, self-actualization, and civic empowerment. Part 2, Labor Concepts and Market Integration, refers to the multifunctionality of third sector organizations, discussing potentials of workplace as well as community involvement via nonprofit organizations. This seminal volume will be of interest to those in the nonprofit sector, organizational management, and economics, political scientists, and others.
