

Nursing Metaparadigm of Different Nurse Theorists

	PERSON	HEALTH	NURSING	ENVIRONMENT
NIGHTINGALE	Human beings were not defined by Nightingale specifically.	Nightingale (1859/1992) did not define health specifically.	"What nursing has to do... is to put the patient in the best condition for nature to act upon him" (Nightingale, 1859/1992)	Nightingale's writings reflect a community health model in which all that surrounds human beings is considered in relation to their state of health.
OREM	Humans are defined as "men, women, and children cared for either singly or as social units," and are the "material object" of nurses and others who provide direct care.	Health is "being structurally and functionally whole or sound."	Nursing is an art through which the practitioner of nursing gives specialized assistance to persons with disabilities which makes more than ordinary assistance necessary to meet needs for self-care.	The environment has physical, chemical and biological features. It includes the family, culture, and community.
HENDERSON	Individuals have basic needs that are component of health and require assistance to achieve health and independence or a peaceful death.	Health was taken to mean balance in all realms of human life.	"The unique function of the nurse is to assist the individual, sick or well, in the performance of those activities contributing to health or its recovery that he would perform unaided if he had the necessary strength, will or knowledge. And to do this in such a way as to help him gain independence as rapidly as possible."	No explicit definition of the environment, though she stated that: "maintaining a supportive environment conducive for health is one of the elements of her 14 activities for client assistance."
PEPLAU	An organism that "strives in its own way to reduce tension generated by needs."	Health is defined as "a word symbol that implies forward movement of personality and other ongoing human processes in the direction of creative, constructive, productive, personal, and community living."	Hildegard Peplau considers nursing to be a "significant, therapeutic, interpersonal process."	Although Peplau does not directly address society/environment, she does encourage the nurse to consider the patient's culture and mores when the patient adjusts to hospital routine.
ROGERS	A person is defined as an indivisible, pan-dimensional energy field identified by a pattern, and manifesting characteristics specific to the whole, and that can't be predicted from knowledge of the parts.	Rogers defines health as an expression of the life process	Nursing aims to assist people in achieving their maximum health potential.	It is the study of unitary, irreducible, indivisible human and environmental fields: people and their world.
KING	Individuals are social beings who are rational and sentient. Humans communicate their thoughts, actions, customs, and beliefs through language.	Health is a dynamic life experience of a human being, which implies continuous adjustment to stressors in the internal and external environment through optimum use of one's resources to achieve maximum potential for daily living.	Environment is the background for human interactions. It is both external to, and internal to, the individual.	Nursing is a process of action, reaction, and interaction whereby nurse and client share information about their perceptions in the nursing situation.
WATSON	Human being is a valued person to be cared for, respected, nurtured, understood, and assisted; in general a philosophical view of a person as a fully functional integrated self.	Health is the unity and harmony within the mind, body, and soul; health is associated with the degree of congruence between the self as perceived and the self as experienced.	Society provides the values that determine how one should behave and what goals one should strive toward.	Nursing is a human science of persons and human health-illness experiences that are mediated by professional, personal, scientific, esthetic, and ethical human care transactions.

Nursing Theory, Postmodernism, Post-structuralism, and Foucault Olga Petrovskaya,2022-09-30 Nursing Theory Postmodernism Post structuralism and Foucault critiques mainstream American nursing theory and its use of post structural theory comparing and contrasting how postmodern and post structural ideas have been used fruitfully in nursing research and theorizing elsewhere In the late 1980s references to post structuralism and Michel Foucault started to appear in nursing journals Since then hundreds of nursing publications have cited postmodernism and key post structural ideas such as power knowledge discourse and de centring the human subject In Nursing Theory Postmodernism Post structuralism and Foucault Olga Petrovskaya argues that the application of these ideas is markedly different in American nursing theory scholarship compared to nursing theoretical scholarship generated outside the canon of unique nursing theory Analysing relevant literature from the late 1980s through 2010s she demonstrates this difference arguing that American nursing theory calcified into a matrix of dogmas built on logical positivism wary of borrowed theory and loyal to a unique nursing science Post structural ideas that fit the matrix such as criticism of medicine are sanctioned whereas ideas sceptical of humanistic agendas including those that challenge American nursing theory are rendered meaningless In contrast other nurse scholars from Britain Australia Canada and what the author calls the American enclave group engaged with postmodern and post structural perspectives to enrich their research and invite readers to rethink nursing practice The book showcases examples of their intelligent creative theorizing Arguing that American nursing theory enervated nursing theorizing Petrovskaya calls for opening this matrix to theoretical and methodological creativity less rigid categories of scholarship and healthy self examination Making the case that post structural ideas are vital for nurses ability to critically reflect on their discipline and profession this is a necessary read for all those interested in nursing theory philosophy and praxis Chapter 1 of this book is available for free in PDF format as Open Access from the individual product page at www.routledge.com It has been made available under a Creative Commons Attribution Non Commercial No Derivatives 4.0 license

Chronicity : Care and Complexity Rose Richards, Jennifer Creek, 2019-01-04 This volume was first published by Inter Disciplinary Press in 2013 Chronicity is about people rather than medical conditions It may best be understood as a complex phenomenon in which multiple elements interact with each other in unpredictable ways to bring about unanticipated changes Making sense of chronicity therefore requires that we not only pay attention to all aspects of experiencing the condition but also think about the relationships between them
