Telling October Frederick Corney, 2018-08-06 All revolutionary regimes seek to legitimize themselves through foundation narratives that told and retold become constituent parts of the social fabric erasing or pushing aside alternative histories Frederick C Corney draws on a wide range of sources archives published works films to explore the potent foundation narrative of Russia's Great October Socialist Revolution He shows that even as it fought a bloody civil war with the forces that sought to displace it the Bolshevik regime set about creating a new historical genealogy of which the October Revolution was the only possible culmination This new narrative was forged through a complex process that included the sacralization of October through ritualized celebrations its institutionalization in museums and professional institutes devoted to its study and ambitious campaigns to persuade the masses that their lives were an inextricable part of this historical process By the late 1920s the Bolshevik regime had transformed its representation of what had occurred in 1917 into a new orthodoxy the October Revolution Corney investigates efforts to convey the dramatic essence of 1917 as a Bolshevik story through the increasingly elaborate anniversary celebrations of 1918 1919 and 1920 He also describes how official commissions during the 1920s sought to institutionalize this new foundation narrative as history and memory In the book's final chapter the author assesses the state of the October narrative at its tenth anniversary paying particular attention to the versions presented in the celebratory films by Eisenstein and Pudovkin A brief epilogue assesses October's fate in the years since the collapse of the Soviet Union

A Preliminary Analysis of the October 1, 1965 Coup in Indonesia Benedict Anderson,Ruth T. McVey,2009-11 Although numerous accounts have been published of the genesis and character of the attempted October 1965 coup in Indonesia many important aspects of that affair still remain very unclear The fact that in most accounts so much of the picture has been painted in black and white and in language of categorical certainty has served only to paper over the enormous gaps in established knowledge of the event In his present introduction to the paper here published Professor Anderson describes the circumstances surrounding its preparation and the reasons why it was not previously published Indeed because of the avowedly tentative and provisional character of this early effort there would normally be no reason to publish it any more than there would have been to publish the scores of other preliminary drafts prepared over the years by scholars working in the Cornell Modern Indonesia Project However this draft has been given a unique prominence For it has been singled out by a number of those who have subsequently written accounts of the attempted coup among whom all too many have misrepresented the authors ideas and cited words or phrases of theirs out of context Thus there are special reasons now for publishing this draft in its entirety in fairness both to the authors and to all those interested in the events of 1965 so that readers can make their own assessments rather than having to rely upon doctored extracts and tendentious interpretations by writers hostile to the hypotheses advanced by its authors I have found myself in disagreement with some of the views presented in this paper however I believe that despite the limited materials available to the authors over the few months that they collected and analyzed their data this draft which they wrote at the end of 1965 contains a number of important insights and a considerable amount of significant data which other writers have not taken into account Thus those interested in understanding the attempted coup of 1965 particularly if they bear in mind the caveats of Professor Anderson s present introduction should find this paper useful George McT Kahin
