

Early Republic: Foreign Policy

During the Early Republic Era (1783-1815), the United States faced many challenges as it tried to establish its place in the world. After gaining independence, the U.S. needed to develop foreign policies that would protect the young nation from powerful European countries. One of the first major foreign policy issues came with the French Revolution in 1789. While some Americans wanted to support France, President George Washington decided that the U.S. should remain neutral. This Neutrality Proclamation set an important precedent for avoiding involvement in European conflicts.

Trade was another key part of U.S. foreign policy during this period. The United States wanted to expand trade with other countries, but conflicts between Britain and France made this difficult. The British were stopping American ships and forcing sailors into the British navy, a practice known as impressment. To avoid war, President Thomas Jefferson passed the Embargo Act of 1807, which stopped all foreign trade. However, the act hurt the American economy and was unpopular, leading to its eventual repeal.

Relations with Native American tribes and the expansion of U.S. territory were also important foreign policy issues. As Americans moved westward, conflicts with Native American tribes increased. The government made treaties with some tribes, but these treaties were often broken, leading to further tensions. At the same time, the U.S. bought the Louisiana Territory from France in 1803, which doubled the size of the country and opened up more land for settlement.

One of the most significant events in U.S. foreign policy during this time was the War of 1812. The war was fought between the United States and Britain, largely due to issues like
