Scandinavian Language Contacts:

Scandinavian Language Contacts P. Sture Ureland, Iain Clarkson, 1984-10-18 This authoritative collection examines both language contacts in Scandinavia proper and also contacts with non Scandinavian languages The language situation in Scandinavia is a rich and complex one yet hitherto little of the material has been available in English All the essays have as their basic tenet that the essence of every language is the way in which it varies in its development and social use and that this variation is a result of a whole series of geographical sociological and linguistic factors settlement conquest trade and literary bilingualism Together they provide a valuable overview of Scandinavian language contacts at both the synchronic and the diachronic level which will be of interest not only to Germanists and Scandinavianists but also to historical linguists

Accentual Change and Language Contact Joe Salmons, 2003-08-29 The author presents an original proposal for a shared Celtic Germanic accentual system which has fundamental implications for Proto Germanic Convergence and Divergence in Language Contact Situations Kurt Braunmüller, Juliane House, 2009-11-12 This book deals with the consequences of converging and diverging processes and their development in language contact situations It provides insights into the various forms of language contact and the conditions under which bilingual speakers master their every day life in bilingual communities Its nine contributions cover both theoretical and typological aspects such as the classification of languages the role of language contact linguistic complexity and spontaneous speech innovations and convergence and divergence processes in translation morpho syntax and phonology phonetics Taken together these studies provide challenges for linguistic theories that generalize from situations of monolingualism suggesting instead that a sound linguistic theory cannot be a theory for just one single isolated language but must be a theory for at least two languages It must also account for the fact that some structures involved in contact situations are not kept apart but develop in such a way that the distance decreases between the languages involved The Nordic Languages. Volume 1 Oskar Bandle, Kurt Braunmüller, Ernst Hakon Jahr, Allan Karker, Hans-Peter Naumann, Ulf Telemann, Lennart Elmevik, Gun Widmark, 2002 The handbook is not tied to a particular methodology but keeps in principle to a pronounced methodological pluralism encompassing all aspects of actual methodology Moreover it combines diachronic with synchronic systematic aspects longitudinal sections with cross sections periods such as Old Norse transition from Old Norse to Early Modern Nordic Early Modern Nordic 1550 1800 and so on The description of Nordic language history is built upon a comprehensive collection of linguistic data it consists of more than 200 articles written by a multitude of authors from Scandinavian and German and English speaking countries The organization of the book combines a central part on the detailed chronological developments and some chapters of a more general character chapters on theory and methodology in the beginning and on overlapping spatio temporal topics in the end Language Contact across the North Atlantic P. Sture Ureland, Iain Clarkson, 2011-09-08 This volume contains a selection of papers which have been revised and extended for publication from two working groups held at conferences at Galway 1992 and Göteborg 1993 which celebrated the quincentenary of Columbus discovery of America in 1492 The pre Columbian period of language contact is covered by articles on Old Norse in the Faroes Scotland and Ireland the Shetland dialect and Norn and placenames in Iceland and Greenland The articles on the post Columbian period are wide ranging and cover in the Scandinavian context the Scandinavian emigration American Swedish American Finnish Swedish Spanish and various aspects of Norwegian in America and also in Spitzbergen in the British colonial context English dialects in New England Scottish Gaelic in Nova Scotia and Scots in North America Maryland the Appalachians and Virginia in the context of the later continental mass emigration American Dutch Texas German Croatian and Italian Two papers deal with reverse emigration that of Sicilian and Calabrian dialects and the special case of Krio in Sierra Leone Stability and Divergence in Language Contact Kurt Braunmüller, Steffen Höder, Karoline Kühn, 2014-11-15 Convergence i.e. the increase of inter systemic similarities is usually considered the default development in language contact situations. This volume focuses on the other logical possibilities of diachronic development namely stability and divergence two well attested but under researched phenomena. The contributions investigate the sociolinguistic and structural factors and mechanisms that lead to or at least reinforce both types of non convergence despite of language contact. The contributions cover a wide range of language contact situations including standard and non standard varieties.

Language Contact and Development around the North Sea Merja Stenroos, Martti Mäkinen, Inge Særheim, 2012-04-18 This volume brings together eleven studies on the history of language and writing in the North Sea area with focus on contacts and interchanges through time. Its range spans from the investigation of pre Germanic place names to present day Shetland the materials studied include glosses legal and trade documents as well as place names and modern dialects. The volume is unique in its combination of linguistics and place name studies with literacy studies which allows for a very dynamic picture of the history of language contact and texts in the North Sea area. Different approaches come together to illuminate a major insight the omnipresence of multilingualism as a context for language development and a formative characteristic of literacy. Among the contributors are experts on English Nordic and German language history. The book will be of interest to a wide range of scholars and students working on the history of Northern European languages literacy studies and language contact.

German(ic) in language contact Christian Zimmer, 2021 It is well known that contact between speakers of different languages or varieties leads to dynamics in many respects. From a grammatical perspective especially contact between closely related languages varieties fosters contact induced innovations. The evaluation of such innovations reveals speakers attitudes and is in turn an important aspect of the sociolinguistic dynamics linked to language contact. In this volume we assemble studies on such settings where typologically congruent languages are in contact i.e. language contact within the Germanic branch of the Indo European language family. Languages involved include Afrikaans Danish English Frisian Low and High German and Yiddish. The main focus is on constellations where a variety of German is involved which is why we use the term German ic in this book. So far studies on language contact with Germanic varieties have often been separated according to the different migration scenarios at hand which resulted in somewhat different research traditions. For example the so called Sprachinselforschung research on language islands has mainly been concerned with settings caused by emigration from the continuous German speaking area in Central Europe to locations in Central and Eastern Europe and overseas thus resulting in some variety of German abroad. However from a linguistic point of view it does not seem to be necessary to distinguish categorically between contact scenarios within and outside of Central Europe if one thoroughly considers the impact of sociolinguistic circumstances including the ecology of the languages involved such as for instance German being the majority language and the monolingual habitus prevailing in Germany but completely different constellations elsewhere. Therefore we focus on language contact as such in this book not on specific migration scenarios Accordingly this volume includes chapters on language contact within and outside of Central Europe In addition the settings studied differ as regards the composition and the vitality of the languages involved The individual chapters view language contact from a grammar theoretical perspective focus on lesser studied contact settings e g German in Namibia make use of new corpus linguistic resources analyse data quantitatively study language contact phenomena in computer mediated communication and or focus on the interplay of language use and language attitudes or ideologies These different approaches and the diversity of the scenarios allow us to study many different aspects of the dynamics induced by language contact With this volume we hope to exploit this potential in order to shed some new light on the interplay of language contact variation and change and the concomitant sociolinguistic dynamics Particularly we hope to contribute to a better understanding of closely related varieties in contact
