Versteegen,1997      Education Finance Litigation Stacy A. Richardson,2010      State School Finance Litigation Terry N. Whitney,1998      School Finance Litigation ,1984      Educational Finance Law R. Craig Wood,David C. Thompson,1993 This book offers an overview of educational finance law and examines constitutional challenges to state aid plans Chapter 1 provides an introduction to education finance litigation including the early history of education finance litigation and early education finance theory Chapter 2 discusses the states responsibilities for providing equal educational opportunities for public education The third chapter discusses the relationship between revenues state and local and equity horizontal and vertical Chapter 4 examines state finance distribution formulas and chapter 5 presents measurements of education finance equity that occur along the three dimensions of resource accessibility wealth neutrality and tax yield The sixth chapter examines two aspects the philosophical and constitutional of the basis for education finance challenges Overviews of early and contemporary education finance literature are presented in chapters 7 and 8 Chapter 9 offers an analysis of present strategies and lawsuits and the final chapter discusses the future of education finance issues Five tables three figures and a tables of cases are included LMI

Summary of School Finance Litigation Kansas. Legislature. Legislative Research Department,2003      School Finance Litigation ,2007 Over the past several decades a series of lawsuits have challenged funding disparities that exist among school districts within the states Spurred by concerns that such disparities discriminated against students in poor school districts or resulted in an inadequate education school finance plaintiffs began filing lawsuits in federal and state courts based on theories involving educational equity or adequacy This report provides an analysis of litigation regarding school financing including an overview of the legal issues involved in such litigation and a description of the leading school finance cases at both the federal and state level      From Briggs V. Elliott to Abbeville V. South Carolina Delia Bromell Allen,2018 One of the central questions of education finance is how much funding is enough to provide a specific quality of education Concern over the adverse effects of inadequate school funding on student achievement has led to multiple lawsuits throughout the United States However there still remains considerable debate over both the effect of school funding and education finance litigation on both effective policy and student achievement The purpose of this study is to explore the historical legal landscape of school funding litigation in South Carolina Inspired by the Abbeville v South Carolina 2014 ruling this study is important to the state of South Carolina because almost 70 years after the first school funding lawsuits were filed against the state the state Supreme Court has set a precedent for school funding litigation in South Carolina Using a legal research methodological approach this study focuses on the litigation strategies and adjudication of school finance lawsuits in South Carolina along with the implications to policy and student outcomes Situated at the intersection of law finance and politics this study also illuminates factors beyond the law and logic that possibly influenced judicial decisions in South Carolina's school funding cases. The research questions guiding this study are 1 What is the relevant legal history of school funding litigation in South Carolina 2 What factors beyond law and logic were involved in school funding cases in South Carolina 3 What was the legislative response to the litigation decisions 4 How effective has school funding litigation been in improving funding and student outcomes

Challenging School Funding Policies Brett Detering, 2003

A Level Playing Field Jane Fowler Morse, 2012-02-01 In this timely work Jane Fowler Morse reviews the history of school finance litigation in the United States and then examines recent legal and political struggles to obtain equitable school funding in New York Vermont and Ontario. These three places have employed strikingly different strategies to address this issue and Morse analyzes lessons learned at each that will benefit both public officials and citizens interested in seeking reform elsewhere. Drawing on writers from Aristotle to Cass Sunstein and Martin Luther King Jr she also explores the concepts of social justice and equity highlighting the connections between racism poverty and school funding. The result is a passionate plea for equitable funding of public education nationwide to instantiate the ideal of liberty and justice for all.

Some Perspectives on Recent School Finance Litigation Carlee Escue Simon, William E. Thro, R. Craig Wood, 2012 Over the past forty years the highest court of virtually every State has confronted the same fundamental question: is our State's school finance system constitutional. The history of school finance litigation consists of three waves. During the first wave which lasted from the late 1960s until the Supreme Court's decision in San Antonio Independent School District v Rodriguez the plaintiffs relied on the federal Equal Protection Clause. Essentially the plaintiffs asserted that all children were entitled to have the same amount of money spent on their education and/or that children were entitled to equal educational opportunities. Equity suit. The second wave which lasted from the New Jersey Supreme Court's decision in Robinson v Cahill until early 1989 continued to pursue the equity theory but focused on Equality Guarantee Clauses of the State Constitutions. In contrast the third wave which began with the Montana Kentucky and Texas decisions in 1989 and continues to the present involves the adequacy theory of school finance litigation. Under the adequacy theory the plaintiffs relying on the State Constitutions Education Clauses argue that the finance system is unconstitutional because some schools lack the money to meet minimum standards of quality. Given the volume of cases one would expect that the courts would eventually develop a coherent doctrine to decide school finance litigation. Yet despite substantial academic commentary courts continue to struggle with issues concerning justiciability and the appropriate constitutional standard. Recent decisions illustrate the point. For example in Florida a state trial court determined whether broad amorphous claims were justiciable. In South Carolina a trial court addressed the merits following remand from the State's highest Court. In Colorado the State Supreme Court issued an opinion that resolved justiciability while also establishing a constitutional standard for the trial court and giving significant guidance on both merits and remedial issues. The purpose of this article is to review and comment on these recent
