Say Little, Do Much Sioban Nelson, 2010-11-24 In the nineteenth century more than a third of American hospitals were established and run by women with religious vocations In Say Little Do Much Sioban Nelson casts light on the work of these women's religious communities According to Nelson the popular view that nursing invented itself in the second half of the nineteenth century is historically inaccurate and dismissive of the major advances in the care of the sick as a serious and skilled activity an activity that originated in seventeenth century France with Vincent de Paul's Daughters of Charity In this comparative contextual and critical work Nelson demonstrates how modern nursing developed from the complex interplay of the Catholic emancipation in Britain and Ireland the resurgence of the Irish Church the Irish diaspora and the mass migrations of the German Italian and Polish Catholic communities to the previously Protestant strongholds of North America and mainland Britain In particular Nelson follows the nursing Daughters of Charity through the French Revolution and the Second Empire documenting the relationship that developed between the French nursing orders and the Irish Catholic Church during this period This relationship she argues was to have major significance for the development of nursing in the English speaking world Study Guide for Clayton's Basic Pharmacology for Nurses - E-Book Michelle J.

Queensland Nurses Rupert Goodman,2017 The practice of enlisting women as nurses in the organised medical services of an army at war is of relatively recent origin Military nursing as it is sometimes called has its origins in the development of nursing stretching back over many centuries a history in which religion war and science have been interwoven in the development of the nursing profession Civilian nursing has come a long way over more than twenty centuries of caring for the sick at times stimulated by advances in war at times facing periods of decline In part its development had to wait on advances in medicine and science to give it credibility respectability certainty and status Through it all religious orders gave the profession qualities of compassion dedication and caring which are the very heart of nursing whether in civil life or in the army This story is concerned with the evolution of military nursing in the context of religion war and medical science In a sense it grew out of civilian nursing but in later years the two branches of the profession grew side by side each gaining from the other Nursing is one of the oldest activities of mankind for the care of the sick the nourishment of the young and the welfare of the older members of society have always been of concern to the family and to particular individuals and groups in society Queensland nurses will continue to make a valuable contribution to the Royal Australian Army Nursing Corps in the decades ahead wherever the call of duty may lead them
