Fueling Resistance Kate J. Neville, 2021 Fueling Resistance examines conflicts over development projects in energy frontiers places in the world far from sites of economic and political power that are seen as potential suppliers of new energy commodities Neville looks at biofuels in Kenya and fracking in the Canadian Yukon and shows how organizers connect specific energy projects to broader issues of globalization climate food water and justice Taken together the intersecting elements of the political economy of energy finance ownership and trade relations shape the contentious politics of biofuels and fracking at both local and global scales and help explain how and why particular mechanisms of contention emerge at different times and places

Or Words to That Effect Daniel F. Chamberlain, J. Edward Chamberlin, 2016-01-27 This volume raises questions about why oral celebrations of language receive so little attention in published literary histories when they are simultaneously recognized as fundamental to our understanding of literature It aims to prompt debate regarding the transformations needed for literary historians to provide a more balanced and fuller appreciation of what we call literature one that acknowledges the interdependence of oral storytelling and written expression whether in print pictorial or digital form Rather than offering a summary of current theories or prescribing solutions this volume brings together distinguished scholars conventional literary historians and oral performer practitioners from regions as diverse as South Africa the Canadian Arctic the Roma communities of Eastern Europe and the music industry of the American West in a conversation that engages the reader directly with the problems that they have encountered and the questions that they have explored in their work with orality and with literary history

Reading Voices Julie Cruikshank, 1991 This examination of the oral history of the Yukon as it appears in story telling by elders of the native peoples discusses the nature and validity of oral and written tradition and history and examines a number of events in both media
