Reading Narrative Fiction Seymour Benjamin Chatman, 1993 This short fiction anthology offers a more precise and extensive treatment of narrative technique than other books of its kind Targeting the needs and interests of today's readers the author uses down to earth language and builds on readers familiarity with narrative devices in film television and other popular media to teach this new approach to literary analysis While offering more technical depth Chatman never overwhelms He provides unusually clear and exact definitions of such terms as characterization and point of view along with many illustrations of how these techniques actually operate in short stories His explanations and examples enable readers to read narratives with a new awareness of how they are constructed

Children Reading Print and Television Narrative Dr Muriel Robinson, Muriel Robinson, 2020-04-14 Contrary to the popular assumption that television viewing is a very different process from book reading and inhibits reading in a variety of ways the author argues that in fact the two activities can be mutually supportive and involve many of the same strategies It may have implications for teachers as the book offers a research based view and calls for a new emphasis in school practice which will include television as text and which supports children's developing abilities to make meaning from a range of texts The author highlights the need for teachers to consider television in the same way as print media

Testament Narratives Eric J. Douglass, 2018-10-02 Narratives are the concrete manifestation of an author's subjectivity. They function as that person's voice and should be treated with the same respect that is granted to all voices. In Interpreting New Testament Narratives Eric Douglass develops this ethical perspective so that narratives are treated as communication and the author's voice is regarded as a valued perspective. Employing a cross-disciplinary approach, Douglass shows how readers engage narratives as mental simulations creating a temporary possible world that readers enter and experience. To recover communication, readers locate the events of this world in the culture of the intended audience and translate this meaning into the modern reader's worldview. Using a staged reading design, this initial reading is followed by readings of critique.

Narratives in Early Childhood Education Susanne Garvis, Niklas Pramling, 2017-05-08 Over the past few decades a growing body of literature has developed which examines children's perspectives of their own lives, viewing them as social actors and experts in their understanding of the world. Focusing specifically on narratives, this unique and timely book provides an analysis of these new directions in contemporary research approaches to explore the lived experiences of children and teachers in early childhood education, in addition to presenting original research on children's narratives. The book brings together a variety of well-regarded international researchers in the field to highlight the importance of narrative in young children's development from local and global perspectives. While narrative is clearly understood within different countries, this is one of the first texts to build an international understanding, acknowledging the importance of culture and context. It presents up-to-date research on the latest research methods and analysis techniques using a variety of different approaches in order to critically reflect on the future for narrative research and its insights into early childhood education. Narratives in Early Childhood Education will be of interest to postgraduate students, academics, and researchers in early childhood education, as well as early childhood professionals, government policy makers, and early childhood organisations and associations.

Reading Today Heta Pyrhönen, Janna Kantola, 2018-01-15 New technologies are changing our reading habits. Laptops, e-readers, tablets, and other handheld devices supply new platforms for reading, and we must learn to manage them by scrolling, clicking, or tapping. Reading Today places reading in current literary and cultural contexts in order to analyse how these contexts challenge our conceptions of who reads, what reading is, how we read, where we read, and for what purposes, and then responds to the questions this analysis raises: Is our reading experience becoming a flat one? And does reading in a media environment favour quick reading? Alongside these questions, the contributors unpack emerging strategies of reading. They consider, for example, how paying attention to readers' emotional reactions as an indispensable component of reading affects our conception of the reading process. Other chapters consider how reading can be explored through such topics as experimental literature, the contemporary encyclopedic novel, and the healing power of books.
