The first years of her life were marked by few events. She was a quiet steady useful girl finding her chief pleasure in nursing and teaching her brothers and sisters and her chief annoyance in her mamma's attempts to make her a fine lady but before she had reached her nineteenth year she had learnt to know real anxiety and sorrow. Her mother after suffering much from grief at the loss of her two brothers fell into so alarming a state of health that her husband was obliged immediately to hurry her away to Italy leaving the younger children under the care of a governess and the elder boys at school while Eleanor alone accompanied them. Scenes and Characters Charlotte Mary Yonge, 1886 Scenes and characters; or, Eighteen months at Beechcroft ...
