

Advances in Value Theory

SERGIU HART

Tel Aviv University

Value, introduced by Lloyd Shapley in 1953, is a central concept in game theory and its applications. The value of a game to a player is best viewed as an a priori evaluation of his expected payoffs (in a similar way that the "utility" of a "gamble" or "lottery" is a measure of the prospective outcomes). The Shapley value and its generalizations have been extensively studied, and continue to be the focus of much research, both theoretically (leading to interesting and deep mathematical problems), as well as in applications (in economics, political sciences, etc.).

This paper surveys recent advances in the study of the various value concepts. It covers mainly the last decade; the survey of Aumann (1978) is an excellent reference up to that date. We will deal here mostly with theory, the applications of value (which are becoming more and more abundant) being the subject of another survey.

It should be immediately pointed out that this is in no way a comprehensive survey (the allotted time will hardly suffice just to write down the references of papers dealing with value!). It is rather a collection of some results which seem most significant, either in opening up new paths, or in closing up (difficult) gaps left from previous research. Moreover, the presentation will be as informal as possible, the aim being only to focus on the main ideas; for precise and detailed formulations one should of course refer to the original papers.

A two-way standard classification will be used: on one hand, finite versus large games (the former referring to general games with finitely many players, and the latter to asymptotic results—when the number of players increases—and to games with infinitely many players); and on the other hand, transferable utility (TU) versus nontransferable utility (NTU) games (also known as "with/without side payments").

1. FINITE GAMES WITH TRANSFERABLE UTILITY

The main solution concept here, from which the whole theory has developed, is the Shapley value (Shapley, 1953). It may be surprising that after so many years there are still new and interesting things to say about the Shapley value, even in finite-TU games!

These websites range from academic databases offering research papers and journals to online libraries with an expansive collection of books from various genres. Many authors and publishers also upload their work to specific websites, granting readers access to their content without any charge. These platforms not only provide access to existing literature but also serve as an excellent platform for undiscovered authors to share their work with the world. However, it is essential to be cautious while downloading Readings In Mathematical Economics V1 Value Theory. Some websites may offer pirated or illegally obtained copies of copyrighted material. Engaging in such activities not only violates copyright laws but also undermines the efforts of authors, publishers, and researchers. To ensure ethical downloading, it is advisable to utilize reputable websites that prioritize the legal distribution of content. When downloading Readings In Mathematical Economics V1 Value Theory, users should also consider the potential security risks associated with online platforms. Malicious actors may exploit vulnerabilities in unprotected websites to distribute malware or steal personal information. To protect themselves, individuals should ensure their devices have reliable antivirus software installed and validate the legitimacy of the websites they are downloading from. In conclusion, the ability to download Readings In Mathematical Economics V1 Value Theory has transformed the way we access information. With the convenience, cost-effectiveness, and accessibility it offers, free PDF downloads have become a popular choice for students, researchers, and book lovers worldwide. However, it is crucial to engage in ethical downloading practices and prioritize personal security when utilizing online platforms. By doing so, individuals can make the most of the vast array of free PDF resources available and embark on a journey of continuous learning and intellectual growth.
