Morus, 2014-07-14 During the second quarter of the nineteenth century Londoners were enthralled by a strange fluid called electricity In examining this period Iwan Morus moves beyond the conventional focus on the celebrated Michael Faraday to discuss other electrical experimenters who aspired to spectacular public displays of their discoveries Revealing connections among such diverse fields as scientific lecturing laboratory research telegraphic communication industrial electroplating patent conventions and innovative medical therapies Morus also shows how electrical culture was integrated into a new machine dominated consumer society He sees the history of science as part of the history of production and emphasizes the labor and material resources needed to make electricity work Frankenstein's Children explains that Faraday with his colleagues at the Royal Society and the Royal Institution looked at science as the province of a highly trained elite who presented their abstract picture of nature only to select groups The book contrasts Faraday's views with those of other practitioners to whom science was a practical skill based activity open to all In venues such as the Galleries of Practical Science electrical phenomena were presented to a public less distinguished but no less enthusiastic and curious than Faraday's audiences William Sturgeon for instance emphasized building apparatus and exhibiting electrical phenomena while chemists instrument makers and popular lecturers supported the London Electrical Society These previously little studied electricians contributed much to the birth of Frankenstein's children the not completely benign effects of electricity on a new consumer world Originally published in 1998 The Princeton Legacy Library uses the latest print on demand technology to again make available previously out of print books from the distinguished backlist of Princeton University Press These editions preserve the original texts of these important books while presenting them in durable paperback and hardcover editions The goal of the Princeton Legacy Library is to vastly increase access to the rich scholarly heritage found in the thousands of books published by Princeton University Press since its founding in 1905 The Literary Imagination from Erasmus Darwin to H.G. Wells Professor Michael R Page, 2013-05-28 At the close of the eighteenth century Erasmus Darwin declared that he would enlist the imagination under the banner of science beginning Michael Page argues a literary narrative on questions of evolution ecology and technological progress that would extend from the Romantic through the Victorian periods Examining the interchange between emerging scientific ideas specifically evolution and ecology new technologies and literature in nineteenth century Britain Page shows how British writers from Darwin to H G Wells confronted the burgeoning expansion of scientific knowledge that was radically redefining human understanding and experience of the natural world of human species and of the self The wide range of authors covered in Page's ambitious study permits him to explore an impressive array of topics that include the role of the Romantic era in the molding of scientific and cultural perspectives the engagement of William Wordsworth and Percy Shelley with questions raised by contemporary science Mary Shelley's conflicted views on the unfolding prospects of modernity and how Victorian writers like Charles Kingsley Samuel Butler and W H Hudson responded to the implications of evolutionary theory Page concludes with the scientific romances of H G Wells to demonstrate how evolutionary fantasies reached the pinnacle of synthesis between evolutionary science and the imagination at the close of the century

Raiding, Trading, and Feasting Laura L. Junker, 1999-09-01 As early as the first millennium A D the Philippine archipelago formed the easternmost edge of a vast network of Chinese Southeast Asian Indian and Arab traders Items procured through maritime trade became key symbols of social prestige and political power for the Philippine chiefly elite Raiding Trading and Feasting presents the first comprehensive analysis of how participation in this trade related to broader changes in the political economy of these Philippine island societies By combining archaeological evidence with historical sources Laura Junker is able to offer a more nuanced examination of the nature and evolution of Philippine maritime trading chiefdoms Most importantly she demonstrates that it is the dynamic interplay between investment in the maritime luxury goods trade and other evolving aspects of local political economies rather than foreign contacts that led to the cyclical coalescence of larger and more complex chiefdoms at various times in Philippine history A broad spectrum of historical and ethnographic sources ranging from tenth century Chinese tributary trade records to turn of the century accounts of chiefly feasts of merit highlights both the diversity and commonality in evolving chiefly economic strategies within the larger political landscape of the archipelago The political ascendance of individual polities the emergence of more complex forms of social ranking and long term changes in chiefly economies are materially documented through a synthesis of archaeological research at sites dating from the Metal Age late first millennium B C to the colonial period The author draws on her archaeological fieldwork in the Tanjay River basin to investigate the long term dynamics of chiefly political economy in a single region Reaching beyond the Philippine archipelago this study contributes to the larger anthropological debate concerning ecological and cultural factors that shape political economy in chiefdoms and early states It attempts to address the question of why Philippine polities like early historic kingdoms elsewhere in Southeast Asia have a segmentary political structure in which political leaders are dependent on prestige goods exchanges personal charisma and ritual pageantry to maintain highly personalized power bases Raiding Trading and Feasting is a volume of impressive scholarship and substantial scope unmatched in the anthropological and historical literature It will be welcomed by Pacific and Asian historians and anthropologists and those interested in the theoretical issues of chiefdoms

Nineteenth-century Women at the Movies Barbara Tapa Lupack,1999 Eleven essays analyze the adaptations of novels by eight popular writers such as Jane Austen and Harriet Beecher Stowe and examine the ways in which those writers themes are reinterpreted updated and often misconstrued by the filmmakers who bring them to the screen No index Annotation copyrighted by Book News Inc Portland OR Children of the Night Randy Rasmussen,2006-03-24 There are six of them heroines heroes wise elders mad scientists servants and monsters One of the most fascinating and also endearing aspects of horror films is how they use these six clearly defined character types to portray good and evil This was particularly true of the classics of the genre where actors often appeared in the same type of role in many different films The development of the archetypal characters reflected the way the genre reacted to social changes of the time As the Great Depression yielded to the uncertainty of World War II flawed but noble mad scientists such as Henry Frankenstein gave way to Dr Nieman The Ghost of Frankenstein with his dreams of revenge and world conquest This work details the development of the six archetypes in horror films and how they were portrayed in the many classics of the 1930s and 1940s Women Writers Dramatized H. Philip Bolton,2000-01-01 This volume arranged alphabetically by original author provides basic information about stage and screen productions based upon the novels of 40 women writers before 1900 Each entry includes the novel and its publication date the published texts or dramatizations based upon the book and the performances of the piece in live theater and film versions including the location dates and playwright or screenwriter if there was one For some of the performances the author includes a brief annotation listing the actors and describing the production What Do I Read Next? ,1997
