Making Home In Havana:

Making Home in Havana Cecelia Elisabeth Burke Lawless, 2002 Havana is a city that rarely fails to captivate But much of the unique beauty and culture of this historic city is rapidly disappearing As Cuban society finds itself at a crossroads Havana is more than ever a city on the edge for although frozen in time as a consequence of Fidel Castro's revolution it has certainly not been well preserved Time climate and neglect have eroded a rare architectural legacy making the need to document this heritage even more pressing than ever before Making Home in Havana is an elegant book of photographs and testimonies recording questioning and evoking the meaning of place in particular the meaning of home The combination of fine photography and the words of residents of former palaces humble apartments and other dwellings offer us an irresistible portrait of Havana that might otherwise be lost forever Vincenzo Pietropaolo and Cecelia Lawless have made numerous visits to Havana in order to fully understand and convey the essence of what home means to the inhabitants of the dwellings of the El Vedado and Centro Habana neighborhoods Together they and we explore how a building becomes a home through its human history as well as its architectural features With some renovation already underway in colonial Havana they concentrate on largely unexplored and unrecognized sections that continue to fall into ruin The intimacy of their connection with the buildings and people offers us a rare combination of documentary realism and high art Buildings and people speak their histories to us in classic humanistic style Residents of Havana tell their stories of lifelong efforts to turn decay into beauty while the photographer's evocative pictures enable us to feel exactly what they are talking about a creation of time and space called home

The Pride of Havana Roberto Gonzalez Echevarria, 2001-05-24 From the first amateur leagues of the 1860s to the exploits of Livan and Orlando El Duque Hernandez here is the definitive history of baseball in Cuba Roberto Gonzalez Echevarria expertly traces the arc of the game intertwining its heroes and their stories with the politics music dance and literature of the Cuban people What emerges is more than a story of balls and strikes but a richly detailed history of Cuba told from the unique cultural perch of the baseball diamond Filling a void created by Cuba's rejection of bullfighting and Spanish hegemony baseball quickly became a crucial stitch in the complex social fabric of the island By the early 1940s Cuba had become major conduit in spreading the game throughout Latin America and a proving ground for some of the greatest talent in all of baseball where white major leaguers and Negro League players from the U S all competed on the same fields with the cream of Latin talent Indeed readers will be introduced to several black ballplayers of Afro Cuban descent who played in the Major Leagues before Jackie Robinson broke the color barrier once and for all Often dramatic and always culturally resonant Gonzalez Echevarria's narrative expertly lays open the paradox of fierce Cuban independence from the U S with Cuba's love for our national pastime It shows how Fidel Castro cannily associated himself with the sport for patriotic pride and reveals that his supposed baseball talent is purely mythical Based on extensive primary research and a wealth of interviews the colorful often dramatic anecdotes and stories in this distinguished book comprise the most comprehensive history of Cuban baseball yet published and ultimately adds a vital lost chapter to the history of baseball in the U S
