Mail at the Millennium Edward L. Hudgins, 2001-09-25 This book analyzes why the Postal Service needs to be privatized if mail delivery is to be an efficient component of rather than a corroded cog in the communications and information economy The first section examines the state of the USPS including its dangerous forays into cyberspace The second section considers the changing structure of the mail market including a look at labor problems fatal flaws with the organization of the USPS and the probable consequences of competition The third section explores how to unwind government monopolies and reviews postal reforms in other countries The fourth section offers actual reform and privatization proposals Essays by Postmaster General William Henderson Federal Express founder Frederick Smith and Pitney Bowes CEO Michael Critelli contribute to making this volume an indispensable guide for charting the future of mail in the new millennium

Postal and Delivery Services Michael A. Crew, Paul R. Kleindorfer, 2013-12-01 When Postmaster General Creswell penned his concern about the impact of electronic diversion on his postal organization the year was 1872 General Creswell it turned out fretted unnecessarily Facsimile did not achieve commercial viability until roughly a century after his tenure as Postmaster General and today that technology is fading rapidly from the communication scene Moreover it never appears to have significantly affected physical letter volumes However if General Creswell were leading a major postal organization today he likely would feel threatened by the potential of Internet communication to cause electronic diversion of physical mail Should recent technology developments cause the oft predicted but so far incorrect inflection point that would mark the beginning of declining mail volumes the implications from a management standpoint will be profound The relatively fixed nature of postal costs suggest that volume declines must be offset though improved productivity reduced cost of inputs revenue from new products that share common costs or reduced level of universal service
