

A photograph of a suburban street scene. In the foreground, a large, dark tree trunk and its branches are visible on the left side. A white picket fence runs across the middle ground. Behind the fence, there are several houses with light-colored roofs and some greenery. The sky is a pale, hazy blue.

An Epistemology of Noise Cecile Malaspina, 2018-05-31 What do we understand noise to be The term noise no longer suggests only aesthetic judgement as in acoustic or visual noise and is now relevant to domains as varied as communication theory physics and biology This trans disciplinary usage leads to confusion and complication and reveals that the question of noise is a properly philosophical problem Presenting an analysis of the rising interest in the notion of noise this book investigates if there can be a coherent understanding of what it is that can be effectively shared among the natural and human sciences technology and the arts Drawing the philosophical consequences of noise for the theory of knowledge Malaspina undertakes a philosophical revaluation of Shannon and Weaver s theory of information entropy this forms the basis upon which to challenge the common idea that noise can be reduced to notions of error disorder or disorganization The wider consequences of this analysis relate the technological and scientific aspect of noise with its cultural and psycho social aspects At the heart of Malaspina s argument is the contestation of the ground upon which we judge and distinguish noise from information and finally the exploration of its emancipatory potential

Transitions Fredrik Marsh, 2009 American photographer Fredrik Marsh's images tell the story of the great societal upheaval at the end of the twentieth century from an unusual perspective The project deals in general with the passing of time and with change Marsh came to Dresden for the first time in 2002 and the idea for the Transitions The Dresden Project which would not be finally completed until 2006 came to the photographer in a process that can only be described as possessing its own momentum Marsh had started to focus on German history in a downright unconventional manner He developed quite a distinct and unusual interest in the remnants of recent specifically East German history as well as in the changes wrought by the rebuilding and the renewal of Dresden following the peaceful revolution of 1989 He concentrated on the overlapping of different historical layers which he discovered in empty factory buildings barracks and deserted old historic Dresden residences He proceeded like an archaeologist who enters a new territory and secures evidence of former life without influencing it in any way With his pictures Fredrik Marsh pays reverence to the important but also tragic past of this city Marsh received a John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation Fellowship for Transitions The Dresden Project
