We Need for Weed A Smith, 2019-08-20 I know what you're thinking Before I even begin sharing my thoughts you'll think that I'm just a helpless

stoner who wants to legalize marijuana so I can be high all day I m not going to justify your preconceptions with a response not because they re wrong but because I honestly feel it should be legalized for several reasons that don t just benefit me Let s dive in I think marijuana should be legalized because of its medicinal effects According to Medline Plus a National Institutes of Health website 3 5 percent of the United States population has generalized anxiety disorder I m taking medications for it that generally make me drowsy give me insomnia and can make me feel worse than I actually am Plus I get random bouts of depression from them as well Some days I literally just lie in my bed all day and listen to sad music because I feel overwhelmed and upset that death is inevitable But there s a lovely antidepressant known as cannabis It significantly improves mood from THC delta 9 tetrahydrocannabinol which is the main psychoactive chemical in marijuana In addition to the medicinal benefits of cannabis there are no conclusive studies published to prove whether or not marijuana is more dangerous or less dangerous than alcohol The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention CDC reported that around 38 000 deaths last year were alcohol induced There was no category for marijuana related deaths And this was without its legality There are said to be many social benefits to smoking marijuana regularly and cannabis can also spur creativity I m not saying that I recommend smoking pot all the time or even that you should do it once if you re uncomfortable with doing it There are plenty of worse things to do than marijuana murder for one I am upset people seem to be taking the same stance on marijuana that they did on vaccines when Dr Wakefield came out with his experiment Sure it opened up a discussion that was worth having but we really need the research present to form any opinions and have any conclusive changes I m noticing a theme in my editorials for the Chronicle and it s pretty simple to grasp don t be stupid Get the facts and make a decision When you don t know what you re talking about don t spread false information Don t speculate or assume If you care enough about the subject please do some research and try to find the correct answer Until then it s fine to say that you don t know something that s why we re all here to learn We are making scientific advancements every day Anything could be proven wrong at any moment but right now we can only go off of the information that we have at our disposal The earth is still spherical time is still a concept of human perception death is still inevitable Donald Trump still can t win my vote Oprah still won t give me her cell number What was the point of this again Oh yeah don t be stupid I m begging you Just don t On to the next issue

Burton Anderson,2016-06-01 Legalization and decriminalization of marijuana is America s most important social problem You will find that this amazing instructive and timely book explains in easy to understand language

why anyone who is educated in the facts of marijuana's value as a medicine can only conclude that decriminalization and legalization is necessary Our federal government has caved in to the relentless pressure of huge pharmaceutical corporations and other lobby groups who have strongly vested interests in delaying legalization as long as possible It is a national disgrace to watch our PTSD afflicted veterans suffer needlessly It is immoral to incarcerate hundreds of thousands of black youths for minor marijuana offenses And to see millions of Americans suffer every day of their lives when a simple herbal plant used for over 5 000 years could change their lives is more than any moral and caring individual should be able to bear     Everything You've Ever Wanted to Know about Marijuana C.
