Marketing Booze to Blacks George A. Hacker, Ronald Collins, Michael F. Jacobson, 1987-01-01 Beer wine and liquor manufacturers aggressively seek to maximize sales of their products to blacks despite public health and safety problems associated with those products Rather than act to protect the public from the over promotion of alcohol government has set few effective constraints on the sales stratagems of alcoholic beverage producers who advertise their brands to young people and who routinely promote regular daily drinking and appeal to the psychological needs of alcohol abusers Although blacks overall consume less alcohol per capita than whites drinking in the black community results in disproportionately high rates of certain alcohol related problems such as cirrhosis of the liver esophageal cancer and violent crime and accidents But the black population is being targeted for increased consumption Advertising and other marketing practices directed at blacks are examined The alcohol industry s varied public relations and public service activities which have been implemented ostensibly to promote goodwill in the black community result in economic dependence that effectively prevents black media and civic organizations from taking energetic actions against alcohol problems Recommendations are made to help decrease the economic dependence of these organizations on the alcohol industry BJV

Tobacco Issues United States. Congress. House. Committee on Energy and Commerce. Subcommittee on Transportation and Hazardous Materials,1989 The Concept of Race in Natural and Social Science E. Nathaniel Gates,2014-05-01 Explores the concept of race The term race which originally denoted genealogical or class identity has in the comparatively brief span of 300 years taken on an entirely new meaning In the wake of the Enlightenment it came to be applied to social groups This ideological transformation coupled with a dogmatic insistence that the groups so designated were natural and not socially created gave birth to the modern notion of races as genetically distinct entities The results of this view were the encoding of race and racial hierarchies in law literature and culture How racial categories facilitate social control The articles in the series demonstrate that the classification of humans according to selected physical characteristics was an arbitrary decision that was not based on valid scientific method They also examine the impact of colonialism on the propagation of the concept and note that racial categorization is a powerful social force that is often used to promote the interests of dominant social groups Finally the collection surveys how laws based on race have been enacted around the world to deny power to minority groups A multidisciplinary resource This collection of outstanding articles brings multiple perspectives to bear on race theory and draws on a wider ranger of periodicals than even the largest library usually holds Even if all the articles were available on campus chances are that a student would have to track them down in several libraries and microfilm collections Providing of course that no journals were reserved for graduate students out for binding or simply missing This convenient set saves students substantial time and effort by making available all the key articles in one reliable source Authoritative commentary The series editor has put together a balanced selection of the most significant works accompanied by expert commentary A general introduction gives important background information and outlines fundamental issues current scholarship and scholarly controversies Introductions to individual volumes put the articles in context and draw attention to germinal ideas and major shifts in the field After reading the material even a beginning student will have an excellent grasp of the basics of the subject Public Health Reports ,1994 The Challenge of Participatory Research Phyllis Ann Langton,1995 Causes and consequences of alcohol abuse United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Governmental Affairs,1989 Causes and Consequences of Alcohol Abuse: Alcoholism treatment; alcohol abuse prevention United States. Congress. Senate. Committee on Governmental Affairs,1989 Drug Use and Ethnicity in Early Adolescence William A. Vega,Andres G. Gil,2006-04-11 This book presents new and important information about adolescent drug use The book is intended for human service professionals teachers researchers and students interested in the issue of early adolescent drug use and its causes and pervasiveness in a multiethnic population

Today the field of adolescent drug use research relies on integrative models that permit competing explanations of drug use. This approach promotes flexibility in testing hypotheses pertinent to adolescents of very different social and cultural backgrounds or personal characteristics. Longitudinal studies including the one presented in these pages have identified many risk and protective factors or processes that are linked to adolescent drug use. We review these throughout this book and present new information from our own research. Our point of departure is to extend and elaborate descriptive research and models of adolescent drug research to cover the unique and diverse experiences of adolescents who are Hispanic, African American, and White non-Hispanic.

Alcohol and Other Drug Use is a Special Concern for African American Families and Communities, 1990      Desegregating the Dollar Robert E. Weems, 1998-02-01

Capitalism and slavery stand as the two economic phenomena that have most clearly defined the United States. Yet despite African Americans' nearly 500 billion annual spending power, surprisingly little attention has been devoted to the ways U.S. businesses have courted black dollars in post-slavery America. Robert E. Weems Jr. presents the first fully integrated history of black consumerism over the course of the last century. The World War I era Great Migration of African Americans from the rural South to northern and southern cities stimulated initial corporate interest in blacks as consumers. A generation later, as black urbanization intensified during World War II and its aftermath, the notion of a distinct, profitable African American consumer market gained greater currency. Moreover, black socioeconomic gains resulting from the Civil Rights movement, which itself featured such consumer justice protests as the Montgomery Bus Boycott, further enhanced the status and influence of African American shoppers. Unwilling to settle for facile answers, Weems explores the role of black entrepreneurs who promoted the importance of the African American consumer market to U.S. corporations. Their actions ironically set the stage for the ongoing destruction of black-owned business. While the extent of educational employment and residential desegregation remains debatable, African American consumer dollars have by any standard been fully incorporated into the U.S. economy. Desegregating the Dollar takes us through the black exploitation film industry, the vast market for black personal care products, and the insidious exploitation of black urban misery by liquor and cigarette advertisers. Robert E. Weems Jr. has given us the definitive account of the complicated relationship between African Americans, capitalism, and consumerism.

This collection of classic and contemporary articles provides context for the study of advertising by exploring the historical, economic, and ideological factors that spawned the development of a consumer culture. It begins with articles that take an institutional and historical perspective to provide background for approaching the social and ethical concerns that evolve around advertising. Subsequent sections then address the legal and economic consequences of life in a material culture, the regulation of advertising in a culture that weighs free speech against the needs of society, and the ethics of promoting materialism to consumers. The concluding section includes links to a variety of resources such as trade association codes of ethics standards.

and guidelines for particular types of advertising and information about self regulatory organizations
