Moskop, L.M. Kopelman, 1985-09-30 The expense of critical care and emergency medicine along with widespread expectations for good care when the need arises pose hard moral and political problems How should we spend our tax dollars and who should get help The purpose of this volume is to reflect upon our choices The authors whose papers appear herein identify major difficulties and offer various solutions to them Four topics are discussed throughout the volume First encounters between patients and health professionals in critical situations in general and where scarcity makes rationing necessary second allocation and social policy including how much to spend on preventive chronic or critical care medicine or for medicine in general compared to other important social projects third conflicts between or ranking of important goals and values and fourth conceptual issues affecting the choices we make Since these topics are raised by the authors in almost every essay we did not divide the papers into separate sections within the volume Warren Reich begins the volume with a parable illustrating a key problem for contemporary medicine and two very different approaches to its solution His story begins with the delivery of three indigent critically ill foreign patients to the emergency room of a large American private hospital Although the hospital is legally bound to care for these patients providing long term high cost care for them and others soon becomes a major financial strain Introducing Christian Theologies, Volume Two Victor I. Ezigbo, 2015-12-31 Should Christianity's theological face remain largely European and North American in the twenty first century in the wake of the expansion of Christianity in sub Saharan Africa Asia and Latin America The question about the theological face of Christianity cannot be ignored For too long African Asian and Latin American theologians have been left out of mainstream theological discussions Few standard textbooks on Christian theology acknowledge the unique contributions theologians from these continents have made to global Christianity Introducing Christian Theologies Voices from Global Christian Communities is a two volume textbook that alters the predominantly European and North American theological face of Christianity by interacting with voices of Christian communities from across the globe Introducing Christian Theologies explores the works of key theologians from around the world highlighting their unique contributions to Christian theology and doctrine
