Dubino, 2010-11-22 These unique essays focus primarily on Woolf's non fiction and considers her in the context of the modernist marketplace With research based on new archival material this volume makes important new contributions to the study of the gift economy Politics in the Marketplace Katie Jarvis, 2018-12-18 One of the most dramatic images of the French Revolution is of Parisian market women sloshing through mud and dragging cannons as they marched on Versailles and returned with bread and the king These market women the Dames des Halles sold essential foodstuffs to the residents of the capital but equally important through their political and economic engagement held great revolutionary influence Politics in the Marketplace examines how the Dames des Halles invented notions of citizenship through everyday trade It innovatively interweaves the Dames political activism and economic practices to reveal how marketplace actors shaped the nature of nascent democracy and capitalism through daily commerce While haggling over price controls fair taxes and acceptable currency the Dames and their clients negotiated tenuous economic and social contracts in tandem remaking longstanding Old Regime practices In this environment the Dames conceptualized a type of economic citizenship in which individuals activities such as buying goods selling food or paying taxes positioned them within the body politic and enabled them to make claims on the state They insisted that their work as merchants served society and demanded that the state pass favorable regulations for them in return In addition they drew on their patriotic work as activists and their gendered work as republican mothers to compel the state to provide practical currency and assist indigent families Thus their notion of citizenship portrayed useful work rather than gender as the cornerstone of civic legitimacy In this original work Katie Jarvis challenges the interpretation that the Revolution launched an inherently masculine trajectory for citizenship and reexamines work gender and citizenship at the cusp of modern democracy

Mayas in the Marketplace Walter E. Little,2004-12-01 Selling handicrafts to tourists has brought the Maya peoples of Guatemala into the world market Vendors from rural communities now offer their wares to more than 500 000 international tourists annually in the marketplaces of larger cities such as Antigua Guatemala City Panajachel and Chichicastenango Like businesspeople anywhere Maya artisans analyze the desires and needs of their customers and shape their products to meet the demands of the market But how has adapting to the global marketplace reciprocally shaped the identity and cultural practices of the Maya peoples Drawing on over a decade of fieldwork Walter Little presents the first ethnographic study of Maya handicraft vendors in the international marketplace Focusing on Kaqchikel Mayas who commute to Antigua to sell their goods he explores three significant issues how the tourist marketplace conflates global and local distinctions how the marketplace becomes a border zone where national and international developed and underdeveloped and indigenous and non indigenous come together how marketing to tourists changes social roles gender relationships and ethnic identity in the vendors home communities Little s wide ranging research challenges our current understanding of tourism s negative impact on indigenous communities He demonstrates that the Maya are maintaining a specific community based sense of Maya identity even as they commodify their culture for tourist consumption in the world market

Grain storage and marketplace characteristics in Kebbi State, Nigeria Hatzenbuehler, Patrick L.,Mavrotas, George,Maikasuwa, Mohammed Abubakar,Aliyu, Abdulrahaman,Bashir, Amina,2018-09-13 While there are many aspects to agricultural market modernization that are linked and mutually affect and reinforce each other we argue in this paper that investment in Nigeria in physical market infrastructure such as storage units remains relatively neglected especially in rural areas That this is the case undermines successful agricultural development in the country We examine the transactions cost spatial market equilibrium and industrial policy literatures to provide a conceptual context for understanding how and why investments in physical market infrastructure can lower transactions costs for traders and for farmers and thus increase market participation We also implemented a marketplace characteristics survey in Kebbi state an agriculture based state in northwestern Nigeria to determine whether further investments in marketplace infrastructure are needed We found that some markets especially those in rural areas lacked storage units and communications technologies Hence traders and farmers in those markets operate in a challenging environment We argue that investments such as these are likely to be more successful in the long run and have more immediate effects on local agricultural development than would national initiatives Local governments have better knowledge of local conditions and can better design initial investments to strengthen markets and then implement follow on initiatives required to meet needs that arise as market conditions evolve

Ochia, 2022-01-01 This book analyses how informal economy traders and the marketplace institution dominate the local economy in African cities According to the World Bank being an African reduces the probability that an individual is an entrepreneur in the manufacturing sector by more than 95 percent Exporting unprocessed strategic raw materials and importing large volumes of finished goods stagnate Africa's informal sector while creating formal jobs overseas This suggests employment increases in distributive trade and persistence of the marketplace institution in reducing urban unemployment and income inequality However there is limited knowledge of the men and women with permanent stalls in large urban marketplaces that function daily as a temporary city within a city even though they are the major actors in distribute trade More important their daily out of stall contacts resulting from maintaining complex social and economic relationships that determine the financial health of family business and the economy are generally unexplored and largely unknown but have significant unintended consequences on the urban mobility system Researchers planners development practitioners and policymakers have therefore not focused their attention and considered the impacts of the powerful economic institution marketplaces and traders in framing transport planning processes and urban development policies and that is the paradox surrounding marketplace trade and urban development in West Africa The Complete Concordance to Shakespeare:
