Kimmel,Philip J. Kitchen,2016-12-19 This collection examines a key new development in the contemporary marketing landscape the relationship between the informal exchange of information and advice among consumers known as word of mouth WOM and emerging social media Whereas WOM has been around since as long as people have engaged in conversations its transmission is no longer limited to face to face interactions over the clothesline and across backyard fences Today the dissemination of WOM through online channels such as Facebook Twitter LinkedIn YouTube channels blogs and consumer forums has significantly altered the alacrity by which product and service messages are spread across a dramatically expanded consumer audience As marketing practitioners have come to recognize the power of online WOM in terms of its impact on consumer beliefs attitudes and purchasing behavior effective strategies for leveraging the consumer conversation require greater insight and understanding of WOM and social media Towards that end this book offers ground breaking research from an impressive array of internationally renowned marketing researchers on the nature and dynamics of WOM transmitted through social media channels advancing our understanding of consumer influence which to date has largely focused on offline WOM Among the topical issues covered are best practices for marketing practitioners the conversational nature of online WOM the dynamic interplay between online and offline WOM WOM measurement and monitoring and cross cultural influences on WOM This book was originally published as a special issue of the Journal of Marketing Communications Marketing Communications in Practice David Pickton,David Hudson,1993 The Marketing Communications Mix Revisited Mika Raulas,1992 Marketing Communications for a Technology Start-up Company Dolores Franz,2000 Center for Marketing Communications Use of marketing data in the advertising program,Cmc,1977 Elaboration Likelihood Model and Visual Marketing Communications Natalie Janetzko,2021-09-28 Bachelor Thesis from the year 2013 in the subject Communications Public Relations Advertising

Marketing Social Media grade 1 3 University of Frankfurt Main language English abstract Based on the Elaboration Likelihood Model this thesis aims at consolidating diverse research approaches to give an extensive outline of the various ways how visual elements especially images can influence a person's attitude towards the issue of a marketing communication They can be persuasive arguments communicating relevant information serve as peripheral cues that cause affective responses or influence the amount or direction of the cognitive processing of other elements in the marketing communication they are used in As a major part of marketing communications visual elements have received extensive attention in marketing research Many studies were conducted concerning their attitudinal impact on viewers yet the majority only focuses on a limited range of their possible functions Some concentrate on their ability to communicate product information while others examine their ability to attract the viewer's attention to other message components that yield relevant information Depending on its respective role in a persuasion process a visual element can influence attitudes in various manners and the resulting attitudes also differ in their persistence and behavioral impact Therefore it is crucial for marketing managers to understand the situational e.g. distraction and personal factors e.g. need for cognition as well as the properties of a visual element e.g. issue relevance that cause it to assume one of these three roles on one occasion while assuming another in response to the next exposure

Managing Change in Marketing Communications, 1977

Conceptualising Marketing Communication in the New Marketing Paradigm Wilson Ozuem, 2005 There has been a lot of interest among marketing practitioners and researchers in the concept of marketing communications as related to computer mediated marketing environments as a result of the commercialization of the World Wide Web WWW as a marketing and communication medium Despite growing interest there is a dearth of research on the processual nature of communication between marketers and consumers The overall aim of this study therefore is to expand our understanding of marketing communication within the computer mediated marketing environments This understanding is achieved in the thesis by incorporating ideas from traditional marketing communication models those based on a one way general outbound linear model in which marketers deliver communication to customers and prospects and contemporary marketing communications theory within a contextualist framework to examine the evolving marketing communication medium Given the growing empowerment of customers through information technology that has created the interactive marketplace the study aims to illuminate concretely that Internet exerts a mediating influence on the relationship between marketers and consumers Following this articulation the study considers computer mediated marketing environments as a technological development that increases the options for marketing communications Placing marketing communication and computer mediated marketing environments within a historical context of technology as consistent with social constructivist framework rather than thinking about the medium as an isolated phenomenon builds the base for understanding the opportunities and difficulties associated with marketing communications and the Internet in contrast to capabilities for marketing prior to the Internet The current study indicates that marketing communication in the computer mediated marketing environments possess some fundamental uniqueness which are ancillary and augment the consumption processes The study proposed a conceptual framework for understanding marketing communication trajectory in the evolving interactive marketplace The framework proposed provides a new base for developing a wide range of marketing communication programmes for practitioners and academic researchers
