Rebecca Monson, 2023-01-26 Legal scholars economists and international development practitioners often assume that the state is capable of securing rights to land and addressing gender inequality in land tenure In this innovative study of land tenure in Solomon Islands Rebecca Monson challenges these assumptions Monson demonstrates that territorial disputes have given rise to a legal system characterised by state law custom and Christianity and that the legal construction and regulation of property has in fact deepened gender inequalities and other forms of social difference These processes have concentrated formal land control in the hands of a small number of men leaders and reproduced the state as a hypermasculine domain with significant implications for public authority political participation and state formation Drawing insights from legal scholarship and political ecology in particular this book offers a significant study of gender and legal pluralism in the Pacific illuminating ongoing global debates about gender inequality land tenure ethnoterritorial struggles and the post colonial state
