Exposing Slavery Matthew Fox-Amato, 2019-02-26 Within a few years of the introduction of photography into the United States in 1839 slaveholders had already begun commissioning photographic portraits of their slaves Ex slaves turned abolitionists such as Frederick Douglass had come to see how sitting for a portrait could help them project humanity and dignity amidst northern racism In the first decade of the medium enslaved people had begun entering southern daguerreotype studios of their own volition posing for cameras and leaving with visual treasures they could keep in their pockets And as the Civil War raged Union soldiers would orchestrate pictures with fugitive slaves that envisioned racial hierarchy as slavery fell In these ways and others from the earliest days of the medium to the first moments of emancipation photography powerfully influenced how bondage and freedom were documented imagined and contested By 1865 it would be difficult for many Americans to look back upon slavery and its fall without thinking of a photograph Exposing Slavery explores how photography altered and was in turn shaped by conflicts over human bondage Drawing on an original source base that includes hundreds of unpublished and little studied photographs of slaves ex slaves free African Americans and abolitionists as well as written archival materials it puts visual culture at the center of understanding the experience of late slavery It assesses how photography helped southerners to defend slavery enslaved people to shape their social ties abolitionists to strengthen their movement and soldiers to pictorially enact interracial society during the Civil War With diverse goals these peoples transformed photography from a scientific curiosity into a political tool over only a few decades This creative first book sheds new light on conflicts over late American slavery while also revealing a key moment in the relationship between modern visual culture and racialized forms of power and resistance

A wide ranging exploration of the complex and often conflicting discourse on photography in the nineteenth century Framing the Victorians traces various descriptions of photography as art science magic testimony proof document record illusion and diagnosis Victorian photography argues Jennifer Green Lewis inspired such universal fascination that even two so self consciously opposed schools as positivist realism and metaphysical romance claimed it as their own Photography thus became at once the symbol of the inadequacy of nineteenth century empiricism and the proof of its totalizing vision Green Lewis juxtaposes textual descriptions with pictorial representations of a diverse array of cultural activities from war and law enforcement to novel writing and psychiatry She compares for example the exhibition of Roger Fenton s Crimean War photographs 1855 with W H Russell s written accounts of the war published in the Times of London 1884 and 1886 Nineteenth century photography she maintains must be reread in the context of Victorian written texts from and against which it developed Green Lewis also draws on works by Thomas Hardy Nathaniel Hawthorne and Henry James as well as published writing by Victorian photographers in support of her view that photography provides an invaluable model for understanding the act of writing itself We cannot talk about realism in the nineteenth century without talking about visuality claims Green Lewis and Framing the Victorians explores the connections Stories from the Camera Michele M.

Mediating American Autobiography Sean Ross Meehan, 2008 The emergence of photography in the mid nineteenth century transformed ideas about how the self and nature could be pictured Although the autobiographical potential of photography seems self evident today Sean Meehan takes us back to the birth of the medium when some of America's preeminent authors began to think about photography's implications for the representation of identity and the nature of autobiographical writing Both photography and autobiography involve a tension between disclosing and concealing their means of production a chemical process for one the writing process for the other Meehan examines how four major authors Ralph Waldo Emerson Henry

David Thoreau Frederick Douglass and Walt Whitman were well aware of this tension and explored it in their work By examining the implications of early photography in their writings he shows how each engaged the new visual medium how photography mediated their conceptions of self representation and how their appropriation of photographic thinking created a new kind of autobiography Examining the metonymic nature of photography Meehan explores how the new medium influenced conceptions of visual and verbal representation He intertwines these four writers reflections on photography in Emerson s Representative Men Thoreau s journals Douglass s narratives of slavery and Whitman s Specimen Days with theories of photography as expounded by its inventors and observers from Louis Daguerre and William Talbot in Europe to Oliver Wendell Holmes and Marcus Root in America As the first book to focus on the emergence of this new visual medium during the American Renaissance Mediating American Autobiography shows us what photography means for American literature in general and for the genre most closely linked to it in particular Because the engagement of these writers with photography has been neglected in previous scholarship Meehan s work provocatively bridges the study of two media and illuminates an important aspect of American thought and culture at the dawn of the technological era
