Mitchell, 2019-02-28 The British National Daily Press and Popular Music c 1956-1975 constitutes a reappraisal of the reactions of the national daily press to forms of music popular with young people in Britain from the mid 1950s to the 1970s including rock n roll skiffle beat group and rock music Conventional histories of popular music in Britain frequently accuse the newspapers of generating moral panic with regard to these musical genres and of helping to shape negative attitudes to the music within the wider society This book questions such charges and considers whether alternative perspectives on press attitudes towards popular music may be discerned In doing so it also challenges the tendency to perceive evidence from newspapers straightforwardly as a mere illustration of wider social trends and considers the manner in which the post war newspaper industry as a sociocultural entity in its own right responded to developments in youth culture as it faced distinctive challenges and pressures amid changing times Maps and Mirrors Steve Martinot, 2001 Maps and Mirrors explores the links and gaps between the aesthetic and the political at the intersection of philosophy and literature Testing the major voices of aesthetic and literary theory it raises important questions about the implicit political contexts and commitments of thinkers from Kant to de Man Taken together the essays provide a tour of the complexities and richness of contemporary modes of critique Millions Like Us? Visiting Senior Fellow Department of Psychology Nicky Hayes, 1999-01-01 This collection of essays brings together the latest historical research on cultural production and reception during the Second World War It covers the way in which cultural provision was viewed by the labour movement and industry The Study of History, 1988 The chief objective of this text is to provide a handy reference guide for teachers students and researchers of modern European economic and social history Since the bibliography covers only works written in the English language it will probably be of less use to the last named group at least insofar as those within it are already seasoned researchers on a particular country or topic However it would have been quite impossible from the point of view of length to have included all the literature in foreign languages while to have done so would have defeated the essential aim of the volume namely that of providing a reasonably convenient guide for those who teach and study the subject but who are not primarily specialists in the field

Your Britain Laura Beers,2010-05-15 In the early twentieth century new mass media popular newspapers radio film exploded at the same time that millions of Britons received the vote in the franchise expansions of 1918 and 1928 The growing centrality of the commercial media to democratic life quickly became evident as organizations of all stripes saw its potential to reach new voters The new media presented both an exciting opportunity and a significant challenge to the new Labour Party Laura Beers traces Labour's rise as a movement for working class men to its transformation into a national party that won a landslide victory in 1945 Key to its success was a skillful media strategy designed to win over a broad diverse coalition of supporters Though some in the movement harbored reservations about a socialist party making use of the capitalist commercial media others advocated using the media to hammer home the message that Labour represented not only its traditional base but also women office workers and professionals Labour's national leadership played a pivotal role in the effective use of popular journalism the BBC and film to communicate its message to the public In the process Labour transformed not only its own national profile but also the political process in general New Labour's electoral success of the late twentieth century was due in no small part to its grasp of media communication This insightful book reminds us that the importance of the mass media to Labour's political fortunes is by no means a modern phenomenon

Thinking in Film Mieke Bal,2013-12-05 What is a moving image and how does it move us In Thinking in Film celebrated theorist Mieke Bal engages in an exploration part dialogue part voyage with the video installations of Finnish artist Eija Liisa Ahtila to understand movement as artistic practice and as affect Through fifteen years of Ahtila's practice including such seminal works as The Annunciation Where Is Where and The House Bal searches for the places where theoretical and artistic practices intersect to create radical spaces in which genuinely democratic acts are performed Bringing together different understandings of figure from form to character Bal examines the syntax of the exhibition and its ability to bring together installations the work itself the physical and ontological thresholds of the installation space and the use of narrative and genre The double meaning of movement in Bal's unique thought catalyses an understanding of video installation work as inherently plural heterogeneous and possessed of revolutionary political potential The video image as an art form illuminates the question of what an image is and the installation binds viewers to their own interactions with the space In this context Bal argues that the intersection between movement and space creates an openness to difference and doubt By thinking in art we find ideas not illustrated by but actualized in artworks Bal practices this theory in action to demonstrate how the video installation can move us to think beyond ordinary boundaries and venture into new spaces There is no act more radical than figuring a vision of the other as film allows art to do Thinking In Film is Mieke Bal at her incisive innovative best as she opens up the miraculous political potential of the condensed art of the moving image The Mirrors of Washington, Anonymous Clinton Wallace Gilbert, O.
