The Economic and Institutional Setting for Financial Reporting Cases

Cases

C1-1. Novartis AG: Form 20-F Reconciliation (LO 1-6)

Requirement 1:

For 2006, the difference between IFRS net income from continuing operations ($7,019) and US GAAP net income from continuing operations ($5,150) is $1,869 million.

Requirement 2:

Most people would argue that Novartis management would prefer to report the high dollar amount (IFRS net income) rather than the lower US GAAP amount. Reporting higher net income paints a more favorable picture of company profitability. However, doing so may also attract unwanted attention from labor unions, politicians, regulatory agencies, and the financial press.

Requirement 3:

Which is warmer, a room with a temperature of 22.2 Celsius or one where the temperature is 72 Fahrenheit? Even though "72" is bigger than "22.2", neither room is warmer than the other. The difference in measurement scale readings (72 versus 22.2) does not translate into a difference in actual temperature.

Sophisticated investors understand that a similar concept applies to income measured using two different accounting scales: U.S. GAAP and non-U.S. GAAP. Moreover, most investors realize that the absolute dollar level reported by a company is less important than whether earnings are increasing, decreasing, or remaining flat relative to their level one year ago.

Requirement 4:

Investors who contemplate buying (selling) a foreign company's stock traded on a U.S. stock exchange may evaluate its relative profit performance against that of familiar U.S. companies. The Form 20-F reconciliation aids this comparison process by providing investors with an earnings measure that is directly comparable to those reported by U.S. companies.
