Fahrbach, 2013-08-11 A concise introductory textbook on the development of the nervous system This textbook offers a concise introduction to the exciting field of developmental neuroscience a discipline concerned with the mechanisms by which complex nervous systems emerge during embryonic growth Bridging the divide between basic and clinical research it captures the extraordinary progress that has been achieved in the field It provides an opportunity for students to apply and extend what they have learned in their introductory biology courses while also directing them to the primary literature This accessible textbook is unique in that it takes an in depth look at a small number of key model systems and signaling pathways The book s chapters logically follow the sequence of human brain development and explain how information obtained from models such as Drosophila and zebrafish addresses topics relevant to this area Beginning with a brief presentation of methods for studying neural development the book provides an overview of human development followed by an introduction to animal models Subsequent chapters consider the molecular mechanisms of selected earlier and later events neurogenesis and formation of synapses Glial cells and postembryonic maturation of the nervous system round out later chapters The book concludes by discussing the brain basis of human intellectual disabilities viewed from a developmental perspective Focusing on the mechanistic and functional this textbook will be invaluable to biology majors neuroscience students and premedical and pre health professions students An accessible introduction to nervous system development Suitable for one semester developmental neuroscience course Thorough review of key model systems Selective coverage of topics allows professors to personalize courses Investigative reading exercises at the end of each chapter An online illustration package is available to professors National Library of Medicine Current Catalog National Library of Medicine (U.S.), Cellular and Molecular Biology of Neuronal Development Ira Black, 2013-11-11 A central problem in neurobiology concerns mechanisms that generate the profound diversity and specificity of the nervous system What is the substance of diversification and specificity at the molecular cellular and systems levels 4 How for example do 10¹¹ neurons each form approximately 10¹¹ interconnections allowing normal physiological function How does disruption of these processes result in human disease These proceedings represent the efforts of molecular biologists embryologists neurobiologists and clinicians to approach these issues in this volume are grouped by subject to present the varieties The chapters of methods used to approach each individual area Section I deals with embryogenesis and morphogenesis of the nervous system In Chapter 3 Weston and co workers describe the use of monoclonal antibodies that recognize specific neuronal epitopes including specific gangliosides for the purpose of defining heterogeneity in the neural crest an important model system Immunocytochemical analysis reveals the existence of distinct subpopulations within the crest at extremely early stages cells express neuronal or glial binding patterns at the time of migration Consequently interactions with the environment may select for predetermined populations Le Douarin reaches similar conclusions in Chapter 1 by analyzing migratory pathways and developmental potentials in crest of quail
