Roman and Medieval Exeter and their Hinterlands Stephen Rippon,Neil Holbrook,2021-04-30 This first volume presenting research carried out through the Exeter A Place in Time project provides a synthesis of the development of Exeter within its local regional national and international hinterlands Exeter began life in c AD 55 as one of the most important legionary bases within early Roman Britain and for two brief periods in the early and late 60s AD Exeter was a critical centre of Roman power within the new province When the legion moved to Wales the fortress was converted into the civitas capital for the Dumnonii Its development as a town was however relatively slow reflecting the gradual pace at which the region as a whole adapted to being part of the Roman world The only evidence we have for occupation within Exeter between the 5th and 8th centuries is for a church in what was later to become the Cathedral Close In the late 9th century however Exeter became a defended burh and this was followed by the revival of urban life Exeter s wealth was in part derived from its central role in the south west s tin industry and by the late 10th century Exeter was the fifth most productive mint in England Exeter s importance continued to grow as it became an episcopal and royal centre and excavations within Exeter have revealed important material culture assemblages that reflect its role as an international port Venta Belgarum:

The Economics of the Roman Stone Trade Ben Russell, 2013-11-28 The use of stone in vast quantities is a ubiquitous and defining feature of the material culture of the Roman world In this volume Russell provides a new and wide ranging examination of the production distribution and use of carved stone objects throughout the Roman world including how enormous quantities of high quality white and polychrome marbles were moved all around the Mediterranean to meet the demand for exotic material The long distance supply of materials for artistic and architectural production not to mention the trade in finished objects like statues and sarcophagi is one of the most remarkable features of the Roman world Despite this it has never received much attention in mainstream economic studies Focusing on the market for stone and its supply the administration distribution and chronology of quarrying and the practicalities of stone transport Russell offers a detailed assessment of the Roman stone trade and how the relationship between producer and customer functioned even over considerable distances

Corpus Signorum Imperii Romani: fasc. 10. Roman sculpture from London and the south east, 2004

Trade, Commerce, and the State in the Roman World Andrew Wilson, Alan K. Bowman, 2018 In this volume papers by leading Roman historians and archaeologists discuss trade within the Roman Empire and beyond its frontiers between c 100 BC and AD 350 focusing especially on the role of the Roman state in shaping the institutional framework for trade As part of a novel interdisciplinary approach to the subject the chapters address its myriad facets on the basis of broadly different sources of evidence historical papyrological and archaeological demonstrating how collaborations with the elite holders of wealth within the empire fundamentally changed its political character in the longer term

Death in England Peter C. Jupp, Clare

Gittings, 1999 Death in England provides the first ever social history of death from the earliest times 500 000 BC to Diana Princess of Wales The book reveals how attitudes practices and beliefs about death have undergone constant change how why and at what ages people died plagues and violence wills and deathbeds funerals and memorials beliefs and bereavement Richly illustrated striking and often very powerful images In time with the spirit of the age and coming Millenium key scholars in their field write on their respective periods With the recent upturn of popular interest in death through films TV books and newspapers this book will prove stimulating to the general reader to students of archaeology art history medicine and sociology

Clash of Cultures? Roger White, Mike Hodder, 2018-02-21 The general perception of the west midlands region in the Roman period is that it was a backwater compared to the militarized frontier zone of the north or the south of Britain where Roman culture took root early in cities like Colchester London and St Albans and lingered late at cities like Cirencester and Bath with their rich late Roman villa culture The west midlands region captures the transition between these two areas of the military north and civilized south Where it differed and why are important questions in understanding the regional diversity of Roman Britain They are addressed by this volume which details the archaeology of the Roman period for each of the modern counties of the region written by local experts who are or have been responsible for the management and exploration of their respective counties These are placed alongside more thematic takes on elements of Roman culture including the Roman Army pottery coins and religion Lastly an overview is taken of the important transitional period of the fifth and sixth centuries Each paper provides both a developed review of the existing state of knowledge and understanding of the key characteristics of the subject area and details a set of research objectives for the future immediate and long term that will contribute to our evolving understanding of Roman Britain This is the third volume in a series The Making of the West Midlands that explores the archaeology of the English west midlands region from the Lower Palaeolithic onwards

The Learned Collector Lea Stirling, 2010-03-11 Inspired by a classical education wealthy Romans populated the glittering interiors of their villas and homes with marble statuettes of ancestors emperors gods and mythological figures In The Learned Collector Lea M Stirling shows how the literary education received by all aristocrats pagan and Christian alike was fundamental in shaping their artistic taste while demonstrating how that taste was considered an important marker of status Surveying collections across the empire Stirling examines different ways that sculptural collections expressed not only the wealth but the identity of their aristocratic owners The majority of statues in late antique homes were heirlooms and antiques Mythological statuary which would be interpreted in varying degrees of complexity favored themes reflecting aristocratic pastimes such as dining and hunting The Learned Collector investigates the manufacture of these distinctive statuettes in the later fourth century the reasons for their popularity and their modes of display in Gaul and the empire Although the destruction of ancient artwork looms large in the common view of late antiquity statuary of mythological figures continued to be displayed and manufactured into the early fifth century Stirling surveys the sculptural decor of late antique villas across the empire to reveal the universal and regional trends in the late antique confluence of literary education mythological references aristocratic mores and classicizing taste Deftly combining art historical archaeological and literary evidence this book will be important to classicists and art historians alike Stirling's accessible writing style makes this an important work for scholars students and anyone with an interest in Roman statues of this era Lea M Stirling is Associate Professor of Classics at the University of Manitoba and holds a Canada Research Council Chair in Roman Archaeology She co directs excavations at the ancient city of Leptiminus Tunisia
