Death and the Emperor Penelope J. E. Davies, 2010-06-28 The role of monuments in the Roman imperial cult Davies sets out to ask How did the Romans bury Caesar And with what monuments did they sing his praises The architectural elaboration of these structures their siting in the capital the lines of vision and approaches that exposed them to view the paths their complex outworks formed for visitors to walk are all picked out with skill and presented with care in Death and the Emperor Times Literary Supplement This concise and lucidly written book is a very valuable new contribution to the studies of Roman imperial cult political propaganda and topography and has the added benefit of discussing complex scholarly disputes in a manner that the non specialist will probably follow with ease There is material in this volume that will be immensely useful to researchers in many areas archaeology history of architecture iconography history of religion and Roman political propaganda to name just a few I strongly recommend it to scholars interested in any or all of the above topics Bryn Mawr Classical Review Even though its focus is on only seven specimens of architecture the book touches upon a broad array of aspects of Roman imperial culture Elegantly written and generously illustrated this book should be of great interest to the general public as well as to the scholarly community American Journal of Archaeology

The Ancient Roman Afterlife Charles W. King, 2020-03-10 A comprehensive study of the manes their worship and their place in Roman conceptions of their society In ancient Rome it was believed some humans were transformed into special empowered beings after death. These deified dead, known as the manes, watched over and protected their surviving family members, possibly even extending those relatives' lives. But unlike the Greek hero cult, the worship of dead emperors or the Christian saints, the manes were incredibly inclusive, enrolling even those without social clout, such as women and the poor, among Rome's deities. The Roman afterlife promised posthumous power in the world of the living. While the manes have often been glossed over in studies of Roman religion, this book brings their compelling story to the forefront, exploring their myriad forms and how their worship played out in the context of Roman religion's daily practice. Exploring the place of the manes in Roman society, Charles King delves into Roman beliefs about their powers to sustain life and bring death to individuals or armies, examines the rituals the Romans performed to honor them, and reclaims the vital role the manes played in the ancient Roman afterlife. King ranges widely across literary genres, law, epigraphy, and archaeology. He provides a thorough, rigorous, and well-documented study of an aspect of Roman religion and culture that, despite its importance, has so far not received due attention. James B. Rives, author of Religion in the Roman Empire, Groundbreaking. An invaluable resource for scholars of religion, funerary practice, and afterlife in ancient Rome, and more generally, King aims to use his model of variability in Roman belief to show the cult of the dead as inclusive of all Romans, living and deceased. Through extensive literary evidence and select cross-cultural comparisons, he largely succeeds. This stands to become a foundational text. Antiquity. King presents many attractive impressions of Roman society in his study. King's major thesis, that Romans regarded their dead as gods, thought about them, communicated with them, attended to them, and intended to join them, is conclusively presented. The Lives and Deaths of Women in Ancient Pompeii

Brenda Longfellow, 2025-06-10. A study of women's lives in the public sphere of the ancient city of Pompeii. Pompeii's well-preserved remains provide a unique opportunity for the close study of ancient lives. Drawing on statues, inscriptions, graffiti, wall paintings, and the architecture of tombs, sanctuaries, houses, and public spaces, The Lives and Deaths of Women in Ancient Pompeii examines the public lives of women in Pompeii. Art historian Brenda Longfellow explores how historical women of all social backgrounds acted in public and exerted agency on behalf of themselves and others, ultimately finding that female initiatives in Pompeii were not only accepted but desired by the community to a greater extent than has previously been recognized. Longfellow centers her study on a few key women, including the city's most notable female patron, Eumachia, and uses them to examine female roles in postmortem commemorations, civic patronage, and benefactions, commerce, the priesthood, and the home. By following these individuals, Longfellow examines women's lives in Pompeii in both abstract and concrete ways, allowing readers to better understand their importance to the city and society. The result is a groundbreaking book that foregrounds the agency of women in everyday Pompeii.

Death and Dynasty in Early Imperial Rome

J. Bert Lott, 2012-08-30. The founding of the Roman Principate was a time of great turmoil. This book brings together a set of important Latin inscriptions, including the recently discovered documents concerning the death of Germanicus and trial of Cn.

Piso in order to illustrate the developing sense of dynasty that underpinned the new monarchy of Augustus Each inscription is supplied with its original text a new English translation and a full introduction and historical commentary that will be useful to students and scholars alike The book also provides important technical help in understanding the production and interpretation of documents and inscriptions thereby making it an excellent starting point for introducing students to Roman epigraphy

Robes, Romans, and Rituals in First Corinthians Aldar Nõmmik,2024-12-04 This thesis offers a novel interpretation of 1 Cor 11 2 16 in light of the Roman ritual practice of capite velato a custom of covering the head with a garment during prayer sacrifice and divination It traces linguistic and conceptual links between ancient descriptions and depictions of capite velato and 1 Cor 11 2 16 and demonstrates that this ritual gesture must have been familiar to Paul and his Corinthian interlocutors With the aid of cognitive science of religion this thesis explores the possible reasons for and implications of Paul s instructions on this Roman custom in First Corinthians It argues that 1 Cor 11 2 16 preserves a clash of values between Paul and his addressees in regards to the correct procedure and efficacy of prayer and accessing of divine knowledge some in Corinth had begun to argue that for the sake of uniformity all members of the Christ association including married women of all cultures should strip their heads of everything when in prayer or when seeking divine knowledge to match the appearance of Roman men whom Paul had asked not to pray with garments over the head In response to this Paul found a way to argue that praying with a garment over the head is only shameful for men but the same does not apply for women and so women can keep their head coverings and hair accessories on during prayer and prophecy While these instructions may have been intelligible to the original readers later interpreters of Paul who had no knowledge of the Sitz im Leben that prompted 1 Cor 11 2 16 misunderstood and misappropriated Paul s instructions in this passage mistakenly believing Paul to have been solely concerned with a faction of rebellious women in the Corinthian congregation These assumptions have dominated the readings of 1 Cor 11 2 16 but this thesis offers an alternative interpretation that builds on a more accurate understanding of ancient customs and ideals related to ritual head coverings

Ritual, Emotion, and Materiality in the Early Christian World Soham Al-Suadi, Richard S. Ascough, Richard E. DeMaris, 2021-12-30 This volume advances our understanding of early Christianity as a lived religion by approaching it through its rites the emotions and affects surrounding those rites and the material setting for the practice of them The connections between emotions and ritual between rites and their materiality and between emotions and their physical manifestation in ancient Mediterranean culture have been inadequately explored as yet especially with regard to early Christianity and its water and dining rites Readers will find all three areas ritual emotion and materiality engaged in this exemplary interdisciplinary study which provides fresh insights into early Christianity and its world Ritual Emotion and Materiality in the Early Christian World will be of special interest to interdisciplinary minded researchers seminarians and students who are attentive to theory and method and those with an interest in the New Testament and earliest Christianity It will also appeal to those working on ancient Jewish and Greco Roman religion emotion and ritual from a comparative standpoint

Judgment According to Works in Romans Kevin W. McFadden, 2013-10-01 Kevin W McFadden shows that Paul wrote the letter to remind Roman Christians of his gospel because of his vocation as apostle to the Gentiles The letter simultaneously demonstrates the guilt of the world and calls Paul s audience to live out the implications of the gospel The theme of judgment thus appears in two distinct ways Paul opposes justification by works of law but simultaneously affirms as did most of the early Christian movement McFadden argues a final judgment according to works These are not contradictory observations but belong together in a cohesive understanding of Paul s theology and of his purpose in the letter

The Gospel of Mark Gabriel Nieto Zahíno, 2023-09-01 Few works have gazed on the Marcan topic with as much a detail as this one The tradition on the origin and authorship of the second Gospel looms up from the shadows in southern central Anatolia closing the first third of the first century AD pointing out the relation of Mark one of the most consistent secondary figures of the New Testament and Peter the apostle In no more than fifty years tradition will stress the link of Mark s work with the imperial see Rome Nieto Zahino s monograph takes pains to submit all the available diagnostic material in the Marcan tradition from the first century to the early third century AD to unceasing examination presenting the reader with historical archaeological geographical grammatical and codicological approximations while surveying afresh three of the chief candidates for the critical reconstruction of the second Gospel Rome Jewish Palestine and the especial blend between the former two that once existed Caesarea Maritima More than an autopsy over a dead document Nieto Zahino's analysis returns us to the living force of Scripture an odyssey through ancient Christianity that will not leave the heart of the most exigent scholars untouched
