In the preface to An Essay on Man, Alexander Pope says, "If I could flatter myself that this Essay has any merit, it is in steering betwixt the extremes of doctrines seemingly opposite." The "doctrines" that Pope talks of are the seeming contradiction in human mind that, there exist, "not many certain truths in this world" . In other words, Pope writes of the contradictions that lie in man's imperfect perception of the God's creation.

God created the world, but man's speculations and pride that makes him blind to the perfection with which God has created it. Therefore, the contradictory "doctrines" that Pope refers to are those of Christianity and deism.

In his Essay, Pope intended to express a philosophy about the seamless creation that God has made, but Man, blinded in his pride of uncertainty, fails to perceive its full appeal: "the disputes are all upon these last, and I will venture to say, they have less sharpened the wits than the hearts of men against each other, and have diminished the practice more than advanced the theory of Morality."

Clearly, the "dispute" lies in the heart of Man that, crippled with its own vanity, fails to see the ethereal beauty of God's creation and looks at it with questioning mind: "The pride of aiming at more knowledge, and pretending to more Perfection, the cause of Man's error and misery." Pope in his Essay talks of this disconnect and of his belief that the discontent of humanity is not caused by flaws in God's design, but by Man's pride.

This essay discusses the philosophy that Pope brings forth in his Essay that Man, in his pride and disbelief, is blinded and fails to realize the beauty and sublimity in the perfect world that God has created, rather it is Man who creates the dissonance and distortion to this seamless creation.

An Essay on Man was written by Alexander Pope in 1733-34 and was published anonymously. The poem presents Pope's most "extensive disquisition on philosophical, cosmic, and social themes" and sparked one of the greatest debates on "beneficence of Nature, and the role of individual society" .

Pope's Essay on Man Alexander Pope,1885 Essay on Man Moral Essays and Satires Alexander Pope,2008-05 Pope s life as a writer falls into three periods answering fairly enough to the three reigns in which he worked Under Queen Anne he was an original poet but made little money by his verses under George I he was chiefly a translator and made much money by satisfying the Frenchclassical taste with versions of the Iliad and Odyssey Under George I he also edited Shakespeare but with little profit to himself for Shakespeare was but a Philistine in the eyes of the French classical critics But as the eighteenth century grew slowly to its work signs of a deepening interest in the real issues of life distracted men s attention from the culture of the snuff box and the fan As Pope s genius ripened the best part of the world in which he worked was pressing forward as a mariner who will no longer hug the coast but crowds all sail to cross the storms of a wide unknown sea Pope s poetry thus deepened with the course of time and the third period of his life which fell within the reign of George II was that in which he produced the Essay on Man the Moral Essays and the Satires These deal wholly with aspects of human life and the great questions they raise according throughout with the doctrine of the poet and of the reasoning world about him in his latter day that the proper study of mankind is Man Alexander Pope's An Essay on Man (Epistle IV) Roger Day,Open University,1979
