

TEENS AND DRUGS

Read the following texts.

1. Smoking trends among British children and teenagers

According to the latest government figures, 23% of all 15-year-olds are regular smokers. Many of these teenage smokers are already addicted to nicotine, that is, they need to smoke their first cigarette of the day as soon as they get up. It's like they are physically and mentally dependent on it. Some of them spend all their pocket money to buy cigarettes. It's a very expensive addiction. Eight out of ten smokers begin under the age of 20 and the majority wish they had never started. By the age of sixteen, two thirds of children have experimented with cigarettes. In Great Britain about 450 children start smoking every day.

In: Current, 2003 (adapted)

2. What factors influence children and teenagers to start smoking?

Teens often start smoking because one or both parents or relatives are smokers. They feel that smoking is an acceptable habit. Others smoke because it isn't acceptable in their families and they believe they are old enough to make their own decisions. Many teens also start smoking because they feel a constant pressure from their friends. They want to be part of the group so they have to smoke. Others smoke because they feel they look too young and that smoking may make them appear like an adult. Girls think that smoking is a way to keep their weight under control. If they hold a cigarette, they're a lot less likely to eat. And then there are teens who believe that smoking helps them to relax when they are stressed out because of schoolwork, dating problems, or family pressure.

3. Why do teenagers drink?

Alcohol is the least expensive drug in the world. That's why it is one of the biggest problems. Most teenagers drink when they are with a group of friends and they can't find anything better to do. For others drinking is just a peer pressure. Belonging to a group is important. They don't want to be outsiders or to feel alone. Some teenagers think drinking helps to relax and forget the stress of schoolwork and personal and family problems.

4. How can alcohol affect teenagers?

Alcohol can cause you to act in ways you wouldn't normally – this includes putting yourself in danger, getting into fights, playing pranks or committing crimes, or just doing embarrassing things. Drinking too much can make you throw up or it can give you a hangover. And if you really drink too much, you can even go into a coma or die of an alcohol overdose. Alcohol is especially harmful to teenagers' bodies, which are still growing and developing. Alcohol can damage your growth, making you smaller. It kills your immune system, so you're not protected from diseases. And alcohol also affects your heart, brain, liver and many organs. It has been linked to life-threatening problems like heart disease and cancer.
