Ron Eyerman and Orvar Löfgren

Putting Yourself in the Driver's Seat

Every now and then when your life gets complicated and the weasels start closing in, the only real cure is to load up on heinous chemicals and then drive like a bastard from Hollywood to Las Vegas. To relax, as it were, in the womb of the desert sun. Just roll the roof back and screw it on, grease the face with white tanning butter and move out with the music at top volume, and at least a pint of ether.

This is Hunter S. Thompson's (1973: 19) version of a well-known American daydream: hitting the road. It may surface, albeit in less spectacular form, in the everyday life of the most stable family man or woman: in the middle of a traffic jam with the windows closed to keep out the fumes and the country music in the cassette-player to dampen the frustration, the impulse to take the next exit and leave it all behind, the bills, the noisy kids, the overbearing boss, can hit any person in modern society. This spontaneous impulse, which almost always is repressed as soon as it appears, is pre-programmed and builds on a cultural matrix that has been created through exposure to generations of American writers, artists, musicians, film-makers and advertising agents.

The dream of 'hitting the road' and the weightless life along the way has, in other words, a long cultural history. It draws upon an image of a constantly changing United States of America, on the move somewhere, and is composed of a specific iconography and aesthetic. This is a landscape one meets not only in films, but in Elmore Leonard's crime stories, Sam Shepard's plays, Levis ads, television soaps. It can also be uncovered in the short stories of Raymond Carver, Richard Ford and Jayne Anne Phillips, to name three authors who have contributed to a genre that could be called

Romancing the Roads Gerry Hempel Davis, 2015-11-15 This newly updated compendium of facts observations discoveries reviews serendipities humor experiences and more is not only for the road traveler but the armchair traveler as well It reads not as a phone directory but more as a shared diary of discoveries along America s highways and byways Unless otherwise noted the author has visited every place mentioned from Bud s Discount Center in Jasper Alabama to the Waldorf Astoria hotel in New York Even if you never get in the car and discover such wonders for yourself you will enjoy this vicarious journey to places both sublime and ordinary as the author makes her way from Maine to Florida and west to the Mississippi River

Romancing the Novel Margaret Bruzelius, 2007 Romancing the Novel examines the ways in which romance forms characteristic of boys books as exemplified in the novels of Scott Dumas Verne and Stevenson influence narratives not generally put in the same category both psychoanalytical accounts of the psyche and novels by authors as diverse as George Eliot Ursula Le Guin Joseph Conrad and W G Sebald Adventure has been most recently studied largely as a symptom of imperialism s ideological apparatus But as an intensely familiar story available from the earliest reading adventure conditions the narratable its influence is felt from the nursery bed to the analyst s couch By reading Maurice Sendak with Melanie Klein and Peter Rabbit with Daniel Deronda Romancing the Novel argues that the power and depth of the generic constraints of the adventure form have not been recognized simply because they are so ubiquitous Adventure fiction is not merely summer reading whose ephemeral effects dissipate but rather a pervasive code that exerts powerful effects on the imaginable

Roads, Tourism and Cultural History Rosemary Kerr, 2018-12-20 Roads and road tourism loom large in the Australian imagination as distance and mobility have shaped the nation s history and culture but roads are more than simply transport routes they embody multiple layers of history mythology and symbolism Drawing on Australian travel writing diaries and manuscripts tourism literature fiction poetry and feature films this book explores how Australians have experienced and imagined roads and road touring beyond urban settings from Aboriginal songlines to modern day road trips It also tells the stories of iconic roads including the Birdsville Track Stuart Highway and Great Ocean Road and suggests alternative approaches to heritage and tourism interpretation of these important routes The ongoing impact of the colonial past on Indigenous peoples and contemporary Australian society and culture including representations of the road and road travel is explored throughout the book The volume offers a new way of thinking about roads and road tourism as important strands in a nation s cultural fabric
