The Pleasures of Contamination David C. Greetham, 2010 Through the concept of contamination David Greetham highlights various ways that one text may invade another carrying with it a residue of potential meaning While the focus of this study is on written works the scope ranges widely over music politics art science philosophy religion and social studies Greetham argues that this sort of contamination is not only ubiquitous in contemporary culture but may also be a necessary and beneficial circumstance Tracing contamination from the Middle Ages onward he takes up issues such as the placement of quote marks in Keats's Ode to a Grecian Urn the controversy over the use of evidence for yellowcake uranium in Niger and the reconstitution of reality on YouTube to illustrate that the basic questions of evidence fact and voice have always been slippery concepts

Text, Context and Performance James A. Kapaló, 2011-09-20 Past scholarship on the Gagauz people has focused on their ethnic origins and the tension between their Christian faith and Turkish linguistic identity This study based on extensive fieldwork in the Republic of Moldova approaches the problem of this central dichotomy in Gagauz identity through the lens of daily religious practices This empirical approach reveals how scholarly discourses on folk religion guide the local fieldworker's identification of what are folk religious practices and thus actualises folk religion in a given context The book offers a fresh methodological perspective on folk religion as discourse and object of study and is the first monograph in a Western European language on the religion history and identity of this under studied European people

Text, Context and the Johannine Community David A. Lamb, 2014-04-24 Text Context and the Johannine Community adopts a new approach to the social context of the Johannine writings by drawing on modern sociolinguistic theory Sociolinguistics emphasizes language as a social phenomenon which can be analysed with reference not only to its broad context of culture but also through the use of register analysis to its narrower context of situation The Johannine writings have increasingly been seen as the product of a distinct Johannine Community depicted by some scholars as a sectarian group opposed both to wider Jewish society and to other Christian groups This model has largely been constructed on historical critical grounds yet given our lack of reliable external information about the origin of the Johannine writings a more fruitful approach may be to examine their lexico grammatical and discourse features to determine what these imply about interpersonal relationships This study compares selected narrative asides from the Gospel of John with a passage section from 1 John and with the two shorter Johannine Epistles It concludes that register analysis of these texts does not support the idea of a close knit sectarian group

Pre-text, Text, Context Robert L. Mitchell, 1980 The nineteenth century in France is a nightmare for literary historians Their thirst for categorization is more easily quenched by prior centuries to which because they seem unified by cohesive preoccupations and common goals such appellations as the Renaissance the Classical Age or le grand siècle and the Enlightenment or Age of Ideas are appropriately applied For the protean nineteenth century for which no such handy tag has been or can be devised is beyond all else distinguished by extreme heterogeneity and eclecticism A period of chaotic social and political instability of scientific and industrial revolution it is in literature a time not of solidarity but of unprecedented individualism Collective social consciousness yields to isolated probings into the uncharted recesses of the human mind and soul and revolt against standardized even valorized literary practice is seen in such developments as the slow undermining of the accepted literary lexicon and of the qualities of unity clarity and reason and in a radical overhauling of the system of prosody If such diversity precludes coherence in nineteenth century French literature it can itself be recognized as the 2organizing3 element of this literary epoch And it is precisely this paradox that the essays in this volume intend to reflect They are not unified as orthodoxy might dictate by a common approach or theme or author Rather they are marked as was the century that is their context by divergence and variety not harmony and consistency Multiformity in theme is reflected in discussions of such varied topics as pygmalionism allegory mirage self consciousness plagiarism madness feminism the grotesque dance and alchemy which are addressed in turn from a variety of critical approaches thematic intertextual historical stylistic psychocritical sociological and semiotic Ecclecticism indeed has shaped the basic conception of the collection Part 1 examines themes presented as pretext that inform either authorial motivation or the orientation of a text prior to its actual inscription Part 2 approaches the process of writing from the perspective of the text itself And Part 3 is concerned with those spatial temporal and linguistic elements context that surround the literary text
