Austria in 2011 and links literary and cinematic works of translation fiction to state of the art translation theory and practice. It presents not just a mixed bag of cutting edge views and perspectives but great care has been taken to turn it into a well rounded transfictionario with a fluid dialogue among its 22 chapters. The Postmodern Chronotope is an innovative interdisciplinary study of the contemporary. It will be of special interest to anyone interested in relations between postmodernism, geography and contemporary fiction. Some claim that postmodernism questions history and historical bases to culture, some say it is about loss of affect, loss of depth, models and superficiality, others claim it follows from the conditions of post industrial society and others cite commodification of place, Disneyfication, simulation and post tourist spectacle as evidence that postmodernism is wedded to late capitalism. Whatever postmodernism is or turns out to have been, it is bound up in rethinking and reworking space and time and Paul Smethurst's intervention here is to introduce the postmodern chronotope as a term through which these spatial and temporal shifts might be apprehended. The postmodern chronotope constitutes a postmodern world view and postmodern way of seeing. In a sense it is the natural successor to a modernist way of seeing defined through cubism, montage and relativity. The book is arranged as follows: Part 1 is an interdisciplinary study casting a wide net across a range of cultural, social and scientific activity from chaos theory to cinema, from architecture to performance art, from IT to tourism. Part 2 offers original readings of a selection of postmodern novels including Graham Swift's Waterland and Out of this World, Peter Ackroyd's Hawksmoor and First Light, Alasdair Gray's Lanark, J. M. Coetzee's Foe, Marina Warner's Indigo, Caryl Phillips, Cambridge and Don DeLillo's The Names and Ratner's Star. Translation and the Making of Modern Russian Literature Brian James Baer, 2015-11-19. Explores the complex role played by translation in the development of modern Russian literature and Russian national identity.
