Report on the Assessment of Electronic Government Information Products, 1999 The Federal Depository Library Program FDLP has served and continues to serve the American public by ensuring localized access to Federal Government information The mission continues to be as important today to the fundamental success of our democracy as it was when the FDLP was created The FDLP's original mandate to assist Americans regardless of economic education or geographic considerations is one that must not be lost as we strategically and thoughtfully use the tools of the electronic age to enhance that mandate The purpose of this study was to assess electronic medium and format standards for the creation and dissemination of electronic information products The Superintendent of Documents will use the study to continue to plan and implement the transition to a more electronic FDLP

Report on the Assessment of Electronic Government Information Products, 1999 A Comprehensive Assessment of Public Information Dissemination United States. National Commission on Libraries and Information Science, 2000 It was a simple announcement on a summer day It appeared to be a straightforward proposal to solve a serious problem Constrained by a statutory requirement for self funding and facing a new paradigm in information dissemination the National Technical Information Service NTIS was failing As federal agencies distributed reports at no cost on the World Wide Web reports that formerly NTIS had distributed NTIS was unable to collect revenue sufficient to cover its costs of cataloging and maintaining its collection The proposal put forth in August 1999 by the Department of Commerce where NTIS is organizationally located was to close NTIS and move its collections and functions to the Library of Congress The National Commission on Libraries and Information Science NCLIS immediately recognized this proposal to be far more significant than it first appeared Fundamental issues regarding how the government used disseminated and valued its information resources were at stake The Commission stepped forward and prepared a preliminary assessment of the proposed closure of NTIS which it delivered to the President and Congress This report recommended a number of steps to keep NTIS operational but it also stated that a much broader assessment of the underlying issues involved in public information dissemination throughout government was needed
