What's the best research approach?

Research (methodological) approaches have been identified as representing three categories:

- 1) How is knowledge built (i.e. the components or values)?
- 2) How does this knowledge differ from research?
- 3) What information is being gathered (i.e. the content)?

Key issues?

- 1) Ontological
- 2) Methodological

- 7) Knowledge

What is the best research method approach?

"It is not sufficient to select from the existing... it is rather to be a methodological approach that organizes and facilitates the building of new knowledge. While existing research has a strong focus on the content of the research, the approach is applied and the focus of the research is the building of new knowledge. Building on existing knowledge, the approach is the building of new knowledge" (Mackenzie, 2002, p. 200)
