Protect Defend:

The Politics of Protection Elizabeth G. Ferris, 2011-05-01 For the past decade humanitarian actors have increasingly sought not only to assist people affected by conflicts and natural disasters but also to protect them At the same time protection of civilians has become central to UN peacekeeping operations and the UN General Assembly has endorsed the principle that the international community has the responsibility to protect people when their governments cannot or will not do so Elizabeth Ferris explores the evolution of the international community's understandings of protection with a particular emphasis on the humanitarian community Protection is a noble word with positive connotations but what does it actually mean in practice Does providing assistance to vulnerable people protect them for example Does monitoring the number of rapes protect women Does increased engagement in protection activities by humanitarian agencies jeopardize the cornerstone humanitarian principles of neutrality and impartiality In The Politics of Protection Ferris examines inconsistent ways in which protection is defined and applied For example why do certain groups receive international protection while other equally needy groups do not Her case studies ranging from Iraq to Katrina illustrate the challenges and limitations of protecting vulnerable populations from the ravages of war and natural disasters Ferris argues that the protection paradigms currently in use are inadequate to meet the challenges of the future such as climate change protracted displacement and the changing nature of warfare

There has been a growing interest in indigenous knowledge systems and research This interest has been mainly triggered by the need to decolonize education as a response to the colonial onslaught on indigenous knowledge and people Research has however concentrated on the generality of the indigenous knowledge system rather than on its related dimensions One area that has suffered a lack of attention is indigenous conceptions of science technology engineering and mathematics STEM despite the unquestionable evidence of STEM in indigenous contexts Most STEM is presented by colonial establishments and representations especially in developed modern urban contexts which portray STEM as a colonial construct This book focuses on indigenous technological knowledge systems education ITKSE Indigenous people have been at the front of technological developments from pre colonial times The list of precolonial industries science and technology is extensive including blacksmithing wood carving textile weaving and dyeing leather works beadworks pottery making architecture agricultural breeding metal working salt production gold smithing copper smithing leather crafting soap making bronze casting canoe building brewing glass making and agriculture for example In some parts of the world such as Africa and Australia these technologies still exist ITKSE should not be left to exist outside of the technology education curriculum and classroom as it can benefit both indigenous students who have been denied learning about what is relevant to them and non indigenous students These cultural groups can expand their knowledge of technology by learning both ITKSE and Western technological knowledge systems education WTKSE ITKSE also presents opportunities for technology teachers to reflect on and revisit their depth of technological knowledge pedagogies and assessment The intent of this book is transformational in the sense that it brings decolonial and indigenous perspectives into the technology education context It extends technology education in the sense that it will not only influence Western minded architects artisans designers etc but encourage indigenous mindedness as well The Century Dictionary ,1890 Tax and the Environment Anuschka Bakker,2009 This book highlights the opportunity to save taxes and the environment It provides a thorough overview of both environmental taxes and tax incentives related to environmentally friendly investments and activities It starts with a general introduction into the principles of environmental taxation and then by looking at a set of 13 countries the book provides an analysis of tax measures in the field of direct and indirect taxation with regard to the environment It concludes with a comparative overview of the tax measures in the countries discussed Criminal Law David C.
