

Ancient Athens

The most powerful Classical city-state was Athens. Its bustling town spread out around a rocky hill called the Acropolis, topped with gleaming marble temples.

Around 100,000 people lived in Athens, including craftsmen, merchants, philosophers, and politicians.

The city was surrounded by high walls. Towered gateways were designed to let troops through and keep enemies out.

The first ever symposium in Athens was on the Acropolis. Later, the hill became a sacred place for worshipping the gods.

The agora market was at the heart of the city. Athenians came here to buy and sell goods, and catch up on the latest news.

The city's streets

The agora was surrounded by open-fronted market buildings called stoa.

Stoa of Poros

Place for meeting gods

Many gods were dedicated to a group of Athenians called the tribe. They met here in the bouleuterion to debate important issues.

Stoa - men and women forced to work for each others - were paid in the market square

A long road called the Panathenaic Way led from the main city gate

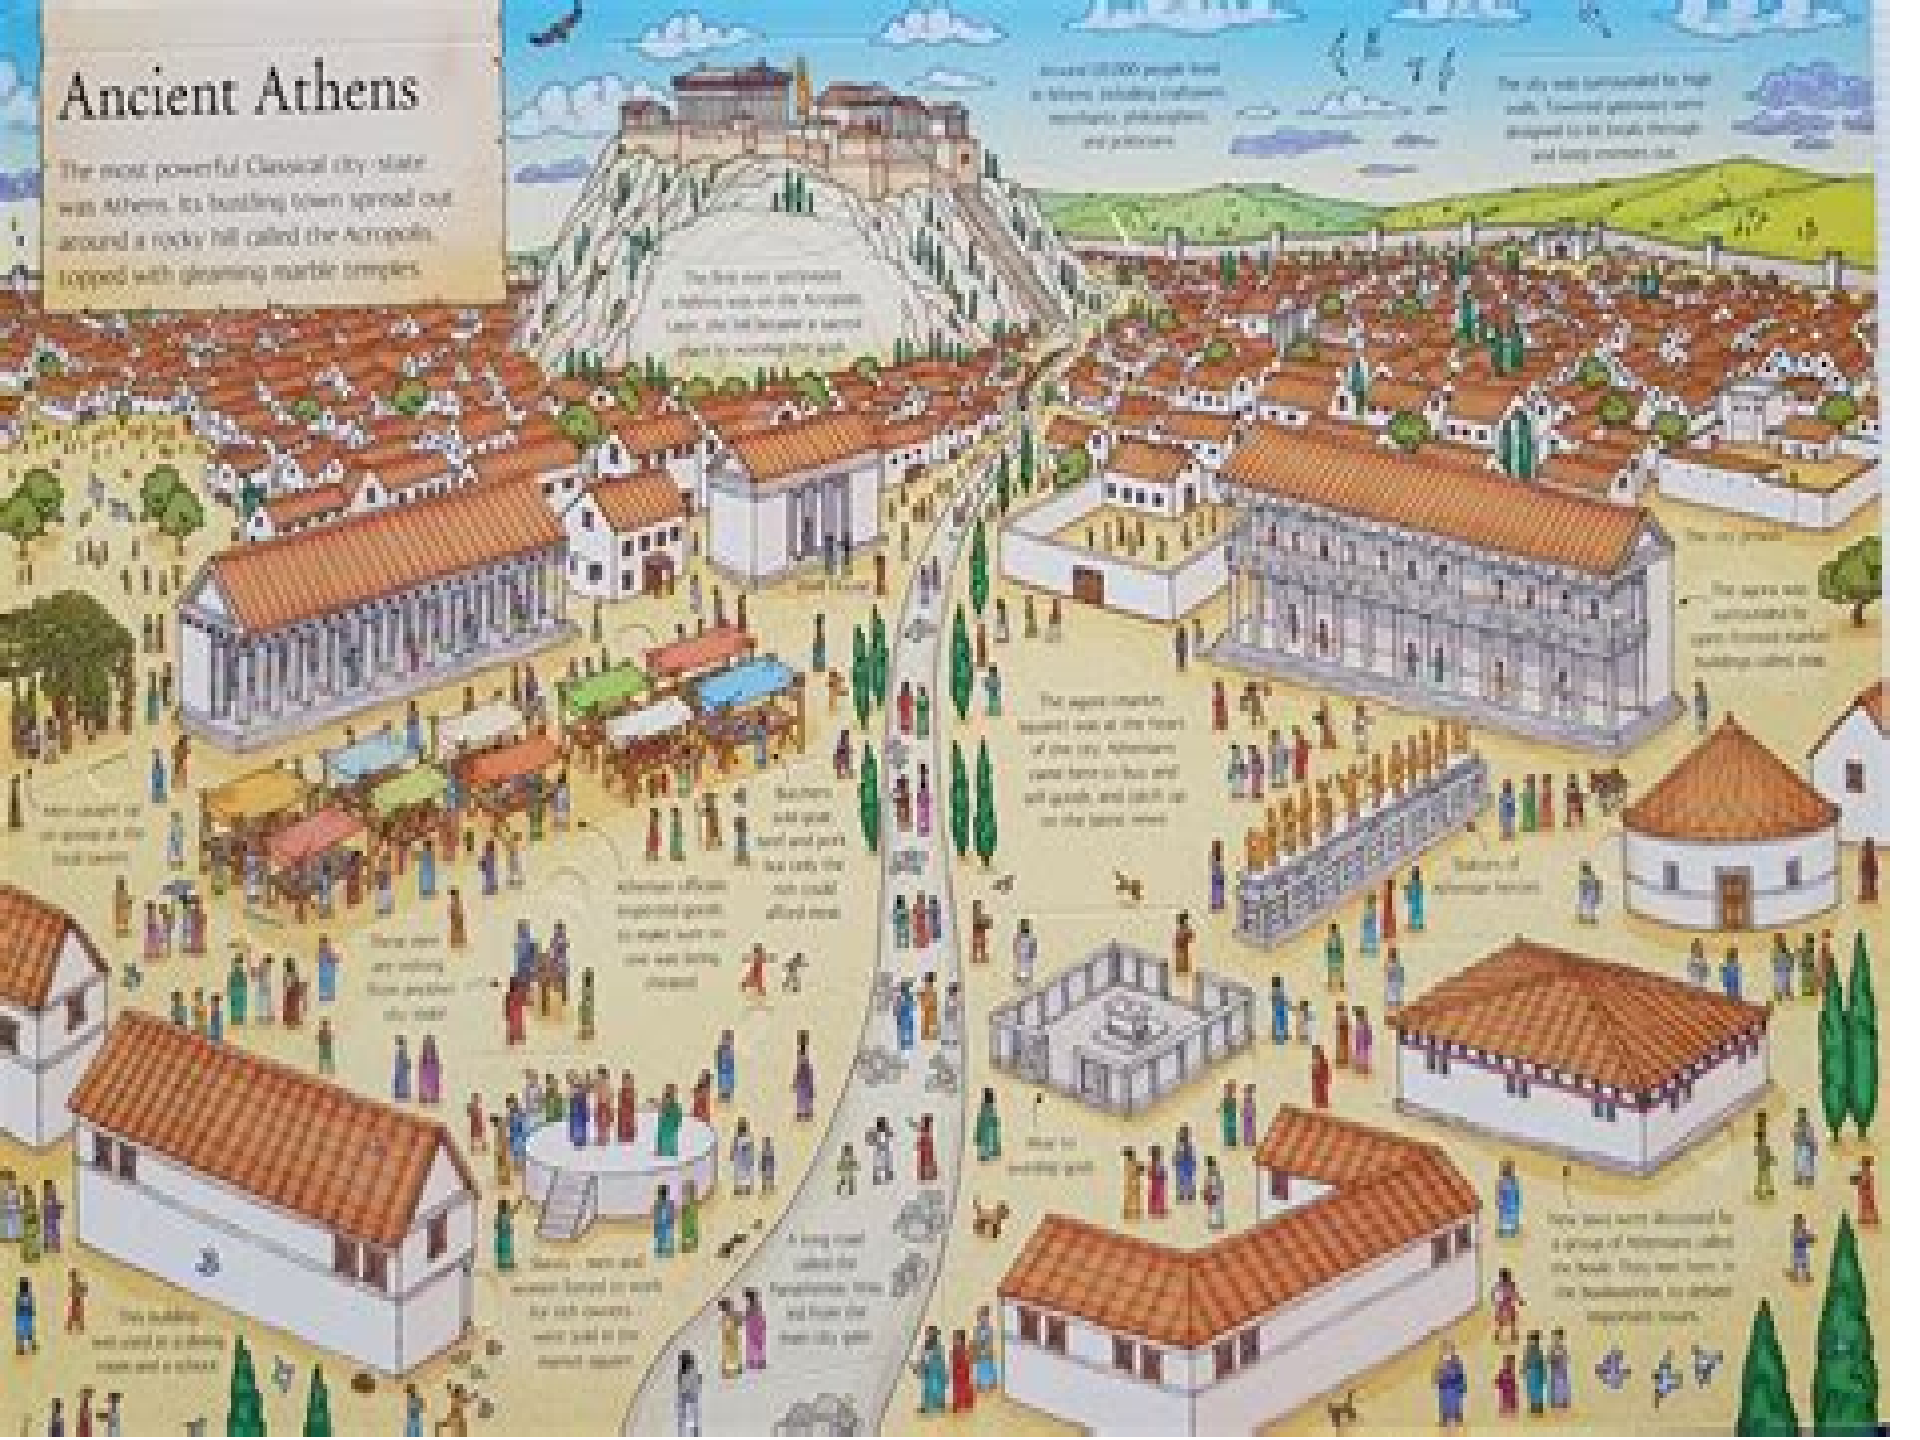

Athenian officials inspected goods to make sure no one was selling cheap

Teachers and poets held and gave lectures but only the rich could afford them

There were no money from outside the state

Men could be on guard at the local tavern

This building was used as a library, museum and a school
