

course in international transactions may very well find that the law he subsequently practices has been substantially modified. However, he has available here extensive and well-selected materials describing the underlying policies from which different solutions evolve under a changed Administration or set of economic circumstances.

The authors do not rely merely on a series of cases with bare-bones comment. This is a sensible approach because, as opposed to many other areas of the law, today's leading cases are just footnotes tomorrow. There are almost sixty cases reprinted that are used as a stepping-off point with substantial secondary materials. Of particular interest are the many extracts from statements of former Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Stanley S. Surrey, the principal architect of both the 1962 and 1966 legislation, which go far toward explaining the fiscal and economic theories which underlie those laws.

The book avoids getting deeply involved in the intricacies of such problems as "Subpart F income" and the "effectively connected" rules enacted in 1962 and 1966 respectively—some of the most complicated legislation ever promulgated—yet deals with them in a more than adequate fashion. Teachers should realize that most of the important material is in the first three chapters. The last three chapters deal with matters of peripheral interest. The third chapter adopts a quasi-transactional approach in discussing alternative methods of foreign operations. While this has its advantages, it results in such complicated subjects as the foreign tax credit being divided between a discussion of branch operations and foreign subsidiaries.

Of particular value to the attorney and scholar are the extensive citations to additional sources which reflect the expertise and unusual combination of talents of the well-known authors.

Public Papers of the Secretaries-General of the United Nations. Volume I: Trygve Lie, 1946-1953. Edited by Andrew W. Cordier and Wilder Foote. New York and London: Columbia University Press, 1969. pp. xv, 535. Index. $15.00.

This is the first of a series of volumes containing the public statements of the Secretaries General of the United Nations. As the highest ranking official of the world organization, the Secretary General is called upon to speak out on many occasions: official, ceremonial, informal, educational, and other. By what he has to say he can help shape opinion, and attempt to mold the course of events toward peace and co-operation.

The papers reproduced here include reports, statements and memoranda taken from official U.N. records, communications to governments that are in the public domain, press releases and transcripts of press conferences. There are also texts of broadcasts, addresses, some correspondence, plus contributions to books and periodicals. The papers contained in this volume give a broad picture of Mr. Lie's public rôle complementing the re-
