One Of Us The Mastery Of Joseph Conrad:

One of Us Geoffrey Galt Harpham, 1996 Joseph Conrad has traditionally been seen as a master a master mariner master storyteller master of the secrets of the human heart master of fictional technique Recently however these compliments have given way to charges that Conrad is complicit in the various masteries associated with racism imperialism and the patriarchy In this book Geoffrey Galt Harpham inquires not only into Conrad s work and reputation but also into the idea of mastery as such

All the Difference in the World Natalie Melas, 2007 This book is about culture and comparison Starting with the history of the discipline of comparative literature and its forgotten relation to the positivist comparative method it inquires into the idea of comparison in a postcolonial world Comparison was Eurocentric by exclusion when it applied only to European literature and Eurocentric by discrimination when it adapted evolutionary models to place European literature at the forefront of human development This book argues that inclusiveness is not a sufficient response to postcolonial and multiculturalist challenges because it leaves the basis of equivalence unquestioned The point is not simply to bring more objects under comparison but rather to examine the process of comparison The book offers a new approach to the either/or of relativism and universalism in which comparison is either impossible or assimilatory by focusing instead on various forms of incommensurability comparisons in which there is a ground for comparison but no basis for equivalence Each chapter develops a particular form of such cultural comparison from readings of important novelists Joseph Conrad Simone Schwartz Bart poets Aim C saire Derek Walcott and theorists Edouard Glissant Jean Luc Nancy

Conrad, Autobiographical Remembering, and the Making of Narrative Identity Xiaoling Yao, 2023-11-24 Drawing on recent studies on life writing memory the narrative turn and psychology Conrad Autobiographical Remembering and the Making of Narrative Identity is the first major work that extensively explores the dynamic interplay between Conrad's autobiographical remembering and storytelling in relation to his identity construction within a historical and cultural context. This unique perspective makes the book particularly attractive for students, teachers, and researchers of Conrad. Contrary to the prevalent achievement and decline paradigm that implies a decline in quality of Conrad's works in his later period, this volume contends that Conrad's later works continue to engage with the complex questions of memory, identity, and culture, demonstrating a sustained commitment to exploring the intricacies of the human experience. Essential reading for Conrad enthusiasts but also for those who seek to explore how memory studies in literature intersect with psychology, philosophy, and cultural studies.

English Modernism, National Identity and the Germans, 1890-1950 Petra Rau, 2016-05-13. This is the first systematic study to trace the way representations of Germanness in modernist British literature from 1890 to 1950 contributed to the development of English identity. Petra Rau examines the shift in attitudes towards Germany and Germans from suspicious competitiveness in the late Victorian period to the aggressive hostility of the First World War and the curious inconsistencies of the 1930s and 1940s. These shifts were no simple response to political change but the result of an anxious negotiation of modernity in which specific aspects of Englishness were projected onto representations of Germans and Germany in English literature and culture. While this incisive argument clarifies and deepens our understanding of cultural and national politics in the first half of the twentieth century, it also complicates current debates surrounding race and otherness in cultural studies. Authors discussed include major figures such as Conrad, Woolf, Lawrence, Ford, Forster, and Bowen, as well as popular or less familiar writers such as Saki, Graham Greene, and Stevie Smith. Accessibly written and convincingly argued, Rau's study will not only be an important book for scholars but will serve as a valuable guide to undergraduates working in modernism, literary history, and European cultural relations.

Paranoid Modernism David Trotter, 2001. Seeking reasons for modernism's compulsion to experiment, this book explores contemporary definitions of paranoia and its examination through fiction.

Our Conrad Peter Mallios, 2010-09-21. Our Conrad is about the American reception of Joseph Conrad and its crucial role in the formation of American modernism. Although Conrad did not visit the country until a year before his death, his fiction served as both foil and mirror to America's conception of itself and its place in the world. Peter Mallios reveals the historical and political factors that made Conrad's work valuable to a range of prominent figures, including Fitzgerald, Faulkner, Richard Wright, Woodrow Wilson, and Theodore and Edith Roosevelt, and explores regional differences in Conrad's reception. He proves that foreign-authored writing can be as integral a part of United States culture as that of any native. Arguing that an individual writer's apparent national, gendered, racial, or political identity is not always a good predictor of the diversity of voices and dialogues to which he gives rise, this exercise in transnational comparativism participates in post-Americanist efforts to render American Studies less insular and parochial.

Conradian Contracts Tamas Juhasz, 2011-04-28. This book treats Joseph Conrad's simultaneous interests in exchange contracts and the condition of displacement. The central hypothesis is that the novelist's characters face the option of signing or rejecting what might with some generalization be called a social covenant. These individuals conduct a lonely or marginal existence and to ease their isolation they would like to re-enter a community. For this reason they are ready to contribute to larger collective causes and comply with those restrictions that social life in its contractual aspect requires. As Julia Kristeva puts it, 'The foreigner is the one who works yet engagement in transactions in order to earn a social position is fraught with difficulties. In return for their contribution these hard-working characters do not always receive the compensation that they had in mind, especially when their definition of companionship violates the boundaries of legality and social propriety. Their private illicit interests are bound to clash with communal ones and the ensuing negotiating readjustment or compromise seeking either crush the individual party or result in a redefinition of the notion of contract.' This link between exchange and displacement is explored in nine narratives. Just as the concept of exile is used in a broad, often metaphorical sense ranging from characters who are actual migrants through individuals who occupy a marginal position within their native community to individuals who are caught between conflicting cultural-economic models, the trade or contractual alliance that can create or at least promise a sense of communal belonging and personal recognition is also manifold in its definition. Although it always includes, if to varying degrees, the transference of economic goods or entering a specific agreement, exchange is never limited to legal material procedures.
