Public Participatin Science:

Public Participation, Science and Society Mikko Rask, Saulė Mačiukaitė-Žvinienė, Loreta Tauginienė, Vytautas Dikčius, Kaisa Matschoss, Timo Aarrevaara, Luciano d'Andrea, 2018-01-12 The field of public participation is developing fast with phenomena such as citizen science and crowdsourcing extending the resource base of research stimulating innovation and making science more accessible to the general population Promoting public participation means giving more weight to citizens and civil society actors in the definition of research needs and in the implementation of research and innovation As yet there is limited understanding of the implications of widespread use of public participation and as a result there is a risk that it will become a burden for research and an obstacle to bridging the gap between research and society This volume presents the findings of a three year international study on innovative public participation The resulting work studies the characteristics and trends of innovative public participation through a global sample of 38 case studies It provides theoretical generalisations on the dynamics of public participation suggestions for an evaluation framework and clear empirical examples of how public participation works in practice Illustrated by best practice cases the authors identify characteristics which contribute to successful public participation The book is aimed primarily at scholars and practitioners of public participation as well as research managers policy makers and business actors interested in related issues There is also a secondary market for students and scholars of European governance studies sociology and political sciences

Citizen Science Janis L. Dickinson, Rick Bonney, 2012-03-27 Citizen science enlists members of the public to make and record useful observations such as counting birds in their backyards watching for the first budding leaf in spring or measuring local snowfall The large numbers of volunteers who participate in projects such as Project FeederWatch or Project BudBurst collect valuable research data which when pooled together create an enormous body of scientific data on a vast geographic scale In return such projects aim to increase participants connections to science place and nature while supporting science literacy and environmental stewardship In Citizen Science experts from a variety of disciplines including scientists and education specialists working at the Cornell Lab of Ornithology where many large citizen science programs use birds as proxies for biodiversity share their experiences of creating and implementing successful citizen science projects primarily those that use massive data sets gathered by citizen scientists to better understand the impact of environmental change This first and foundational book for this developing field of inquiry addresses basic aspects of how to conduct citizen science projects including goal setting program design and evaluation as well as the nuances of creating a robust digital infrastructure and recruiting a large participant base through communications and marketing An overview of the types of research approaches and techniques demonstrates how to make use of large data sets arising from citizen science projects A final section focuses on citizen science s impacts and its broad connections to understanding the human dimensions and educational aspects of participation Citizen Science teaches teams of program developers and researchers how to cross the bridge from success at public engagement to using citizen science data to understand patterns and trends or to test hypotheses about how ecological processes respond to change at large geographic scales. Intended as a resource for a broad audience of experts and practitioners in natural sciences, information science, and social sciences, this book can be used to better understand how to improve existing programs, develop new ones, and make better use of the data resources that have accumulated from citizen science efforts. Its focus on harnessing the impact of crowdsourcing for scientific and educational endeavors is applicable to a wide range of fields, especially those that touch on the importance of massive collaboration aimed at understanding and conserving what we can of the natural world.

The Professionalization of Public Participation Laurence Bherer, Mario Gauthier, Louis Simard, 2017-03-27. The Professionalization of Public Participation is an edited collection of essays by leading and emerging scholars examining the emerging profession of public participation professionals. Public participation professionals are persons working in the public, private, or third sectors that are paid to design, implement, and/or facilitate participatory forums. The rapid growth and proliferation of participatory arrangements call for expertise in the organizing of public participation. The contributors analyze the professionalization of this practice in different countries: United States, France, Canada, Italy, and the United Kingdom, to see how their actions challenge the development of participatory arrangements. Designing such processes is a delicate activity since it may affect not only the quality of the processes and their legitimacy but also their capacity to influence decision making.

Public Participation Process in Urban Planning Kamal Uddin, Bhuiyan Monwar Alam, 2021-11-29. This book critically examines the public participation processes in urban planning and development by evaluating the operations of Planning Advisory Committees (PACs) through two meta-criteria of fairness and effectiveness. Traditional models of public participation in planning have long been criticized for separating planners from the public. This book proposes a novel conceptual model to address the gaps in existing practices in order to encourage greater public involvement in planning decisions and policymaking. It assesses the application of the evaluative framework for PACs as a new approach to public participation evaluation in urban planning. With a case study focused on the PACs in the Inner City area of Canberra, Australia, the book offers a conceptual framework for evaluating fairness and effectiveness of the public participation processes that can also be extended to other countries such as the United States, the United Kingdom, New Zealand, Canada, Scandinavian countries, the European Union, and some Asian countries such as India. Offering valuable insights on how operational processes of PACs can be reconfigured, this book will be a useful guide for students and academics of planning and public policy analysis as well as the planning professionals in both developed and developing countries.

Public Participation in Sustainability Science Bernd Kasemir, 2003-04-10. This book discusses how citizens can participate more effectively in sustainability science and environmental policy debates. It discusses designs for participatory procedures and experiences of their application to issues of global change. While the focus is on citizen participation, the involvement of specific stakeholders including water managers and venture capitalists is also addressed The book describes how focus group methods were combined with the interactive use of computer models into new forms of participation tested with six hundred citizens The results are discussed in relation to other important topics including greenhouse gas and water management By combining this with an examination of issues of interactive governance and developing country participation the book provides state of the art practical insights for students researchers and policy makers alike

Writing in Knowledge Societies Doreen Starke-Meyerring,Anthony Paré,2011-11-15 The editors of WRITING IN KNOWLEDGE SOCIETIES provide a thoughtful carefully constructed collection that addresses the vital roles rhetoric and writing play as knowledge making practices in diverse knowledge intensive settings The essays in this book examine the multiple subtle yet consequential ways in which writing is epistemic articulating the central role of writing in creating shaping sharing and contesting knowledge in a range of human activities in workplaces civic settings and higher education
