Chapter 13

Process Evaluation and Implementation Theory

"A single governmental strategy may involve the complex and interrelated activities of several levels of governmental bureaus and agencies, private organizations, professional associations, interest groups, and clientele populations. How can this profusion of activities be controlled and directed? This question is at the heart of what has come to be known ... as the "implementation problem."

-Eugene Bardach

The extent to which government interventions contribute to measured results is central to public sector evaluation. Occasionally, evaluations ought to aspire to even higher ambitions. They should try to answer why outcomes do or do not stem from the measures enacted. Following the lead of Urban Dahllöf and several other scholars, I wish to emphasize strongly that the evaluation of at least established interventions should have this extended explanatory ambition. Apart from data on output, outcomes, and general intervention impact on results, evaluations should include more specific information on why installed interventions have succeeded or failed. The evaluation of vintage measures ought to be a theoretical enterprise in the meaning of trying to explain in more detail why the measures have conditioned the impacts or not. I shall call this process evaluation.
