Publishing in Rhetoric and Composition Gary A. Olson, Todd W. Taylor, 1997-03-13. Eminent scholars discuss the politics and practices of generating scholarship in rhetoric and composition studies. Publishing in Rhetoric and Composition is a collection of essays about the politics and practices of generating scholarship in rhetoric and composition. The contributors to this book, many of whom are current or past editors of the discipline's most prestigious scholarly journals, undoubtedly have their finger on the pulse of composition's most current scholarship and offer invaluable insight into the production and publication of original research. They discuss publishing articles and reviews as well as book-length projects including scholarly monographs, edited collections, and textbooks. They also address such topics as how composition research is valued in English departments, recent developments in electronic publishing, the work habits of successful academic writers, and the complications of mentoring graduate students in a publish-or-perish profession. An inviting and helpful tone makes this an ideal textbook for research methodology and professional writing courses.

Getting Published in Academic Journals Brian Paltridge, Sue Starfield, 2016. The pressure on graduate students and new PhDs to publish their work continues to grow, with writing and publishing considered an important measure of career success within the academy. There is, however, more to the process of getting published than those who are new to the process initially realize. The aim of this guide is to clarify the process and offer advice. Getting Published in Academic Journals is written for graduate students and newly graduated PhDs who want to publish their research in peer-reviewed academic journals. Getting Published in Academic Journals draws on the experiences of the authors as editors of peer-reviewed journals, as teachers of writing for publication courses and workshops, as researchers of the scholarly publication process, as reviewers of hundreds of articles, and as published authors. The book is written to be used in courses and workshops on publishing as a supplement to the books in the revised and updated English in Today's Research World Swales & Feak series and as a stand-alone guide for academic writers working independently.

American Haiku Toru Kiuchi, 2017-11-30. American Haiku: New Readings explores the history and development of haiku by American writers, examining individual writers. In the late nineteenth century, Japanese poetry influenced through translation the French Symbolist poets, from whom British and American Imagist poets Amy Lowell, Ezra Pound, T. E. Hulme, and John Gould Fletcher received stimulus. Since the first English-language hokku/haiku written by Yone Noguchi in 1903, one of the Imagist poet Ezra Pound's well-known haiku-like poem "In a Station of the Metro" published in 1913 is most influential on other Imagist and later American haiku poets. Since the end of World War II, many Americans and Canadians tried their hands at writing haiku. Among them, Richard Wright wrote over four thousand haiku in the final eighteen months of his life in
